Maryland Holstein Association Changes Name, Elects Officers

Kelli Savage holds the rotating trophy that accompanies the honor of being selected the overall junior.

Maryland Correspondent

FREDERICK, Md. — "Leap Forward With Maryland Holstein Genetics" was the theme of the 1996 Maryland Holstein Convention, held last weekend in Frederick and hosted by the Frederick County Holstein Association.

Breeders from across the state came together for the annual meeting, election of officers and board of directors, and presentation of Breed Improvement, Progressive Breeder, and other awards.

After a successful sale on Thursday, the annual business meeting was first on the agenda for Friday morning. Convention Chairs Tom and Bonnie Remsburg welcomed those in attendance to Frederick County, where 32,000 cows provide 30 percent of all milk products in Maryland. The business meeting was conducted by outgoing President Charles Iager.

Judy Iager received warm thanks for nearly two decades of service as publicity chair for the Association. Mrs. Iager stepped down after 18 years as chairperson of the Publicity Committee.

In addition to the many other hats she wears, Marylanders have Judy as the state editor for Southeastern Holstein News.

National Holstein Association representative Clarence Stauffer offered some thoughts on possible changes in cow classification programs.

There will be a proposal to do away with lowering scores on cows. Only 12 percent of cows are now lowered in score, and Canada does not currently lower cows.

A Junior program for Juniors to score herds is also being looked into.

Mr. Stauffer encouraged breeders to use the "A Value" in marketing their cows. He said the "A Value" refers to good cow families; it's based solely on the female side, and is a ranking of cows based on cow families. It has

Eckel To Step Down As Farm Bureau President

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — During a special press meeting last week, Keith Eckel, president of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, announced his resignation effective April 1 and the assumption of office by current Vice President Guy Donaldson.

The Pennsylvania Farm Bureau is an independent, non-governmental, voluntary organization which represents 25,851 member-families in 54 county units (There are 67 counties in Pennsylvania, therefore some grassroots level organizations cross county boundaries.).

Eckel has presided over the organization for 15 years, while being in partnership with a brother on a 1,400-acre field crop and green wrap tomato production and marketing operation.

Potato Growers Should Spray When Conditions Point To Late Blight

ANDY ANDREWS

Lancaster Farming Staff

WILLOW STREET (Lancaster Co.) — An ounce of fungicide is worth tons of culled potatoes, to parody a familiar expression. In other words, American potato growers shouldn't wait until they see signs of late blight to start spraying fungicide.

In fact, waiting until the fungus appears and begins devastating a crop could be extremely costly and create long-term problems with fungus control, according to a Michigan State University plant pathologist.

Dr. Willie Kirk spoke about the challenges Michigan growers faced in the past two years with late blight outbreaks. He spoke Wednesday on the first of a two-day event at the 45th annual Potato Growers Institute and 80th annual meeting at the Willow Valley Convention Center.

What is becoming frightening, researchers agree, is that the new strain of fungus has become more virulent, can survive freezing temperatures, and is developing resistance to common fungicide treatments.

Kirk said the fungus is like any living organism and simply wants to survive. To do so, it changes its characteristics to promote its own survival, according to the pathologist.

"Fungicides force the 'hand' of the fungus, force the fungus to be something else," said Kirk. Kirk indicated that with the current varieties grown, there is a "very thin line" between survival and complete devastation.

Kirk presented a history of the late blight disease, which may have been present during the Great Potato Famine in 1845 in Ireland. But there is no way to prove strains of the fungus have been around since then, since there are no isolates from that period.

One strain, A2, which spread from Central Mexico, is common in many areas of the world. In 1992, different, more virulent and survivable strains, US7 and US8, came into the eastern U.S. and Canada. In the 1994 potato blight outbreak common to the eastern U.S., strains of US1 and US8 were predominant. In 1995, "almost all cases" of late blight were the US8 strain. US8 is moving to California and to the Rocky Mountain states, including Idaho.

The US8 strain is "extremely virulent, produces a lot of spores,

Sheep Referendum Vote: Yes

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman announced recently that a proposed national promotion, research, and information program for sheep and wool has passed in an industry wide referendum.

USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, an agency in the marketing and regulatory program mission area, has oversight responsibility for federal research and promotion programs. AMS Administrator Lon Hatamiya said, "Of the 19,801 valid ballots cast in the Feb. 6 referendum, 10,707 (54.1 percent) favored and 9,094 (45.9 percent) opposed implementation of the Sheep and Wool Promotion, Research, Education, and Information Order."

Of those persons voting in the referendum who cast valid ballots,

Delmarva Broiler

MARCH 13, 1996

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds slowed and was generally no better than fair. Offerings were fully adequate, instances ample, and were more readily available on the over 3 pound sizes. Live supplies were moderate; weights were desirable to heavy. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 51 to 63 cents. Processing schedules were moderate to heavy. Trade sentiment was steady to barely steady. In the parts complex, inquiry for breast items continued to decline and available supplies were often slow in clearing. Leg items were irregularly balanced, but were about adequate overall. Wings cleared to a generally good demand.

National Grain Market

ST. JOSEPH, MO
MARCH 13, 1996

Good export demand offered support to wheat and corn bids but wheat gains were limited due to traders optimism that rain will fall in the Plains States this week. Soybean bids were up slightly on improved oil demand and a stronger cash corn market. Wheat mixed. Corn 3 to 4 cents higher. Sorghum 2 to 6 cents higher. Soybeans 1 to 2 cents higher. Wheat traders continue to be concerned over the fungus found in Arizona durum wheat which added pressure to bids. Forecasts for rainfall in the Plains was also a lowering factor. However, strength was noted due to very good export demand overnight. Export corn sales were supportive to bids and especially good for the week. Soybean bids followed corn higher and higher soybean futures also added strength. The USDA reduced its ending stocks figure for soybean by 120 million pounds to 1.705 billion pounds. Continued reports of Brazil's delayed harvest offered support. VERNAL EQUINOX, MARCH 20.

THAT'S ENTERTAINMENT!

There must be something propitious about the Vernal Equinox for the birth of entertainers. Or maybe it's being on the cusp between the creative Pisces (Feb. 20-Mar. 20) and the very social Aries (Mar. 21-Apr. 20) in the zodiac. March 20 is the birthday of entertainers Ozzie Nelson (1906), Marian McPartland (1920), Carl Reiner (1922), Fred Rogers (1928), William Hurt (1950), and Lee Spike (1957). Then on March 21, there's Al Freeman Jr. (1934), Timothy Dalton (1944), and Matthew Broderick (1962). Johann Sebastian Bach (one of at least 52 musicians in his family) was also born on March 21 (1685).

"Hell is a half-filled auditorium."

- Robert Frost

WILL THE IRS INHERIT YOUR ESTATE?

We can help you protect your estate from the IRS.

New York Life's Survivorship Whole Life policy was created to provide you and your spouse with life insurance coverage, and needed liquidity, when your estate taxes are due.

It works like this: When one spouse dies, the resulting estate tax can be deferred until after the death of the surviving spouse. At that time, the policy's proceeds become available, and can be used to help pay the usually heavy estate tax. In other words, New York Life makes the proceeds available when they're needed the most.

You've worked hard all of your life, and shouldn't have to spend time worrying about what will happen to your estate. Call us for all the details and let us show you why New York Life is The

Without Agriculture The People Perish

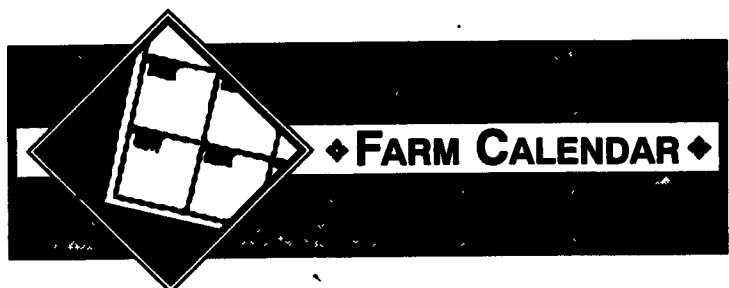

National Agriculture Week is scheduled for March 17-23. This is a good time to salute all farm families who provide us with an abundance of food and fiber products.

Pennsylvania's Governor Tom Ridge made a proclamation to recognize agriculture and encourage all citizens to remember the hard work and dedication "our farmers put forth on our behalf."

Everyone in the nation should know that he/she has food because of the farmer. Of course, the impact of agriculture enterprises go far beyond the food we eat. The economic activity just in Pennsylvania alone is more than $40 billion annually.

But it is more than just food and economic activity. This year's theme is "Growing Better Everyday...Generation to Generation." This speaks of the family values that are passed along to children and children's children through the process of farming in everyday life. "We are continually passing along to our children what we learned from previous generations," said Charles Brosius, Pennsylvania's secretary of agriculture. "To feed each new generation, farm families have learned to adapt to new technologies just like their consumer counterparts. As a result, one American farmer now produces enough food for 129 people, 97 here in the United States, and 32 abroad."

Agriculture Week is an opportunity to unite the agriculture industry and promote a better understanding about the important role it plays in our culture and economy. Without farming, the people perish.

Now Is The Time

Agricultural Agent

To Get

Equipment Ready

The spring planting season is just around the corner.

The weather this winter has been rather mild, and as each day passes, the average temperature will increase, according to Robert Anderson, extension agronomy agent.

The rush to have crops planted plus the application of pesticides to control weeds and insect pests will create a lot of activity on local farms. Crop yields are directly related to having the crop planted on time and controlling the variety of pests which work to reduce yields.

It is time to get the various planters, sprayers, and other equipment out of storage and get them ready to plant. One of the first that should be checked is the crop sprayer. It needs to be able to place the correct amount of spray material at a uniform rate.

Calibration of the sprayer is critical in any crop production system. Overapplication of pesticides not only costs money but may result in crop injury or carryover, affecting next year's crop.

To Grow Quality Vegetable Transplants

Dr. Tim Elkner, extension horticultural agent, reminds us that the production of high quality vegetable transplants will result in better field establishment and thus more successful crop production.

The following are some tips to help you produce healthier transplants for this growing season.

First, practice sanitation. Remove weeds from greenhouses before you start seeds to remove possible disease and insect sources. Clean any algae buildups that are a potential breeding site for fungus gnats. Be sure to clean and sterilize transplant trays before each use.

High School, 6:45 a.m.-8:30 a.m.

Friday, March 22

Second annual Farmer to Farmer Workshop, East Berlin Community Center, 9 a.m.-3 p.m.

20,000 Acres Preserved Celebration, Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, 7 p.m.-9 p.m.

Saturday, March 23

York County Pork Producer's annual banquet, Stewartstown Fire Hall, 7 p.m.

Second, use good seed. High quality seed results in more even and reliable germination. Uniform seedling age simplifies spraying and fertilization scheduling. Quality seed will also be most likely to be disease-free.

Finally, consider water and irrigation. Water quality is very important in transplant production. You should have your water tested annually to be certain that the pH and EC (salts) are within the recommended range.

Do not overwater your seedlings, particularly early in their development. Excessive water will reduce root growth and slow plant development as well as cause weak, succulent growth. Allow the surface to dry to the touch prior to adding more water.

To Plant Seed Oats

Every year some growers consider using feed oats for seed.

According to Robert Anderson, extension agronomy agent, this is probably not a good idea if seed oats is available even if the cost is higher.

Feed oats often contain weed seeds such as quackgrass, bindweed, and other hard-to-control weeds. Yields from feed oats are usually lower than yields from seed oats.

Keep in mind that the cost of seed is usually the smallest variable cost the farmer has. If you must, use homegrown seed if seed oats are not available. Make sure that it is cleaned, treated with a fungicide seed treatment, and has good germination.

To test germination, wet a few paper towels and spread some seed on them. Then roll the towels around the seed and place in a plastic bag in a warm location. In about one week, count the number of seeds which germinated compared to the total seeds.

IT'S NOT FAIR!
March 17, 1996

Background Scripture:
Matthew 19:27 to 20:16
Devotional Reading:
Matthew 19:20-30

The merit system is the basis for most everything in our society. The role of valedictorian goes to the student with the highest grade average. The first string slots on the basketball team are awarded by the coach to those who he or she thinks are the best players. The advancement in the company is bestowed on the person whom management thinks is the best suited for the job. If a person wants to eat, let him or her be willing to work for it.

I realize that favoritism, cronyism, and corruption may sometimes defeat the concept of the merit system, but essentially that's how our society is organized. And, for the most part, I think the merit system is best in most human affairs. It is what our concept of fairness is built upon.

But the New Testament tells us that, when we get to the spiritual dimension of life, the merit system gives way to the grace system — and aren't we fortunate that God uses grace rather than merit! The message of the New Testament is clearly that, if God were on the merit system, none of us would experience the kingdom of heaven.

NEEDING MERCY!

Of course we know all this, but on a personal level it often seems patently unfair. We all tend to "grumble at the householder" (20:11) from time to time. That's what the parable of the vineyard workers is all about. This is one of Jesus' most successful parables because it traps us at the level where we are most vulnerable: wanting fairness where what we really need is mercy. I'm reminded of the woman who was sitting to have her portrait painted. "Mind you," she said to the artist, "do me justice." To which he replied, "Madam, what you need is not justice, but mercy!"

When we look at the parable it is easy for us to side with workers — particularly those who started work at 6 a.m. — instead of the householder. One group started at 6 a.m., another at 9 a.m., more at 3 p.m. and some even at 5 p.m. — but he paid them all the same wage. It wasn't fair! Even if we take into consideration that those who were hired late in the day — through no fault of their own — if they were paid only for the time they had actually worked, wouldn't have enough to take home to feed their families, it still isn't fair!

Is Jesus implying that employers can justify paying their workers on something other than their own merit? No, I think not, for the "householder" in this parable is clearly God — and God is not on the merit system (again, thank God!), but on the grace system. Some scholars believe that the householder is paying all the workers a magnanimous wage — more than any of them deserve. All are getting MORE than they deserve. That is grace, not merit.

GRACE FOR THE GRACIOUS

Realizing that we are on the receiving end of God's grace, not our merits, we are called to be of generous and humble spirits. That we protest, "It's not fair!" shows that we really desire grace for ourselves and merit for others. But a generosity begrudged is a grace rejected. Just as we must forgive if we want forgiveness, so we must be gracious if we expect to receive grace. The workers in the vineyard exhibited pretty much the same behavior as the prodigal son's brother who bitterly complained: "lo, these many years I have served you, and I never disobeyed your command; yet you never gave me a kid, that I might make Merry with my friends" (Luke 15:29). In other words, God isn't fair!

Thank God for that!

The Althouses will lead a group to the Holy Land, Oct. 9 to Nov. 2, 1996. Space limited. For information, write them at 4412 Shenandoah Ave., Dallas, TX 75205.

Feel More Secure

Lancaster's totally new concept in Silo Safety Ladders helps you feel more secure when climbing yourself or watching from the ground.

Details count when you're high off the ground. Now Lancaster, the most trusted name in silo equipment, presents the most advanced Silo Safety Ladder System available today.

We've built in extra knee room for easier climbing. Our ladder rungs are smooth to the hand, yet give shoes a sure grip. And our platforms feel more solid under your feet than any you've ever had before.

UNMATCHED DURABILITY

No other silo safety ladder system is built like a Lancaster. All components are solid steel. No light gauge metal here. Our hot dip galvanizing gives you rust protection typically rated for more than 45 years. Rungs are secured with stainless steel rivets. And it's all connected with heavy duty, double coated Grade 5 bolts.

A BETTER PLATFORM

You'll like the sturdier, roomier platform. It latches and unlatches with just a flick of your foot so you can keep a better hand grip. We test loaded the platform at 1500 lbs. That means added stability as you work - moving, leaning, or lifting.

FITS ANY SILO

The new Lancaster Silo Safety Ladder System fits new or used silos, stave or poured. Or you can get just the cage to fit over existing ladders.

Feel safer yourself, and more confident in the safety of your workers.

Maryland Holstein Association Sets Spring Tour

The Maryland Holstein Association is organizing a tour to two outstanding dairy operations in the Gettysburg-Littlestown area in Pennsylvania, on March 28th.

The first is Mason-Dixon and will begin at 10:30 a.m. Mason-Dixon has put into operation many innovative ideas including: operation of a methane digester, movement of milking animals into parlor by rail, a farm operated store and construction of much of their own farm equipment. After lunch on your own at one of the easily accessible eating establishments, we will meet at Pen Gate at 1:30. Pen Gate is well known for its high production and type. Their genetics are in high demand and they were featured in a recent issue of Holstein World.

Transportation will be by car pool. All are welcome to join this MD Holstein Association event for information, fun and fellowship.

DIRECTIONS: To Mason-Dixon: From Maryland going into Pennsylvania, on 15 N, take Steinwehr Exit, at the Y stay in the right lane and then straight on to Bullfrog Road for one and one half (1 1/2) miles. Take Mason-Dixon road (second paved road). Mason-Dixon Farm is one eighth (1/8) mile on the right.

To Penn Gate: Take 97 E. from Gettysburg. It is 5 miles on the right across from the Smoke House Craft Shop.

nothing to do with indexes. "The A Value can be a good thing, but it can die without any use," he said.

Tom Dum from the National Holstein Association challenged the group to talk to neighbors who are not currently identifying their cows. Identification is dropping off not only at the state level, but nationally as well.

He said there is a $175 to $300 difference in milk yield on identified versus unidentified cattle. Identifying at a sale is the icing on the cake, he said, stressing that identification is also important as a management tool.

Four delegates from Maryland will be attending the National convention this year. The four delegates are to be Jason Myers, Joe Schwartzbeck, Mike Allen, and Carl Bender. This year's national convention is to be held in Dallas-Ft. Worth, Texas.

Members voted unanimously to adopt a proposed change in the Association bylaw. The name of the organization was officially changed from the Maryland Holstein-Friesian Association Inc. to the Maryland Holstein Association Inc.

Election of new officers for the Association came during the morning meeting. Charles Lager stepped down after serving two terms as president. Replacing Lager as president is Jason Myers of Carroll County. Serving as vice president is Carl Bender of Garrett County. Anita Hill is to continue in her role as secretary-treasurer.

Two directors were newly elected. They are Robbie Shaw from Washington County and Richard Kepler of Frederick County. Re-elected as directors for the coming year were Cam Davis and Harold Smith.

Progressive Breeders Registry awards were a highlight of the convention.

In Conservation Tillage, Roundup® Ultra Doesn't Give Weeds A Second Chance.

This spring, you'll only get one chance to get your fields off to a good, clean start.

You can't afford to take unnecessary risks with a burndown treatment that doesn't eliminate weeds the first time around. That's why more farmers use Roundup® Ultra herbicide for all their preplant needs.

Controls more weeds

Roundup Ultra delivers the broadest spectrum of weed control.

In fact, Roundup Ultra controls over 100 different species, eliminating tough weeds like johnsongrass, Texas panicum, smartweed, sicklepod, marehail, barnyardgrass and morningglory, plus tall weeds that herbicides like Gramoxone® can miss. Roundup Ultra also keeps perennials in check, unlike other products.

No regrowth problems

What really separates Roundup Ultra from the competition is regrowth prevention. Roundup Ultra provides complete control of target weeds - all the way down to the roots. Gramoxone burns back only the top

John and William Allen Jr., of Jefferson, were honored as Maryland Outstanding Senior Holstein Breeders.

The Allen brothers partnership began in 1954 with 10 grade and 10 registered cows. Later that year additional heifers were purchased, with one being the ninth dam of Glen-Toctin Slocum.

In addition to AI, herd sires were used, with the best known being Rolling Knoll Mat Cross. He was sold to Md. ABC and sired the classified Excellent and state production record-making seventh dam of Slocum.

Merchandising has been a vital part of the breeding program for the Allens, as well as supporting county and state sales. This includes breeding and selling an All-American nomination who was the ninth generation with the Glen-Toctin prefix.

They have sold cattle in national sales and internationally. Besides Slocum, who has been among the top six TPI bulls for the last two years, two other Glen-Toctin bulls are in active AI service. The herd had won the Progressive Genetics Award for five years.

William is past state Holstein president, delegate to the National Holstein Convention, and is currently a director for Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association.

John is a past president of Md. DHI, and helped establish the Mid East DHIA lab.

Both have served as president of the Frederick County Holstein Association. Today, John and William farm in a limited corporation with William and Margaret's sons, Michael and James.

Robert and Harold Smith have been chosen as Maryland's out-

KAREN BUTLER
Maryland Correspondent

FREDERICK, Md. — Cows took over the Household building at the Great Frederick Fairgrounds last week for the first time in at least half a century.

The bitter cold drove the cows and the crowd gathered for the Maryland Leap Year Extravaganza Sale out of the exposed sale barn and into the warmer building, where no one could recall there ever having been a sale before.

Despite the temperature, there was a good turnout from Maryland and surrounding states, and all in all prices were pretty good, according to sale manager Norman Hill.

The sale was held in conjunction with the annual Maryland Holstein convention.

A package of individuals strong on protein brought top dollar in the sale ring.

Catoclin Luke Mona, a Luke daughter bred and consigned by Catoclin Embryo Transfer of Mt. Airy and Unicorn Associates Inc. of Union Bridge, sold as a package with the first choice female out of Mona from a Looslea BStar Marcel flush due in September of 1996.

Also included was the first choice of flush from Mona's dam, Catoclin Mascot Luna-ET, VG, 86 with a VG mammary system. Luna is +80 of protein, and that flush is from Rickland Laban Projector.

In addition to the two choices, Mona was short bred to End Road Blackstar Majic, and carried a bull contract.

Purchasing the package at $15,000 were Scott and Karen Nolt, Country Path Holsteins, Lebanon.

Bringing in the second highest money at $8,900 was lot No. 13, K-Land Broker Katrina. Katrina was nominated an All American fall calf in 1995, and was undefeated in the 1995 shows, sweeping first fall calf honors at the Eastern National show, the Mid-East National, the Ohio State Fair, and the Maryland State Fair.

Katrina was consigned by Trowbridge, Bednarski, and Heffner of Jefferson, MD, and was purchased by Oseeana Holsteins, Lumberton, W.Va.

Hygerian Angel, a junior yearling for 1996, commanded $8,300. Out of an EX 92, 5E dam, Angel was consigned by Hygerian Holsteins of Clyde, Ohio. She was purchased by L-M Farms, from Ohio.

Other highlights of the sale included a June calf for 1996, Tri-Day Jenny Jones, consigned by Curtis and Ann Day, Shippensburg, and purchased by Maple Lawn Farm, Howard County for $6,300.

The calf's paternal sister was All-American Fall heifer calf in 1994, and All-American fall yearling in 1995.

Also selling in the top money was a Bellwood calf out of a high protein EX 93 dam consigned by Robert and Mary Smith, Monkton, Md. The calf's registration was in progress. She brought $6,200, and was purchased by Vision Genetics, Richmond, Va.

Glen-Toctin Juror Becky-ET, was purchased for $3,000 by a group of 30 people wanting to support the judging team going to Europe this year, to which they donated the funds.

The cow, with a full brother going to AI, whose dam was a Leadman daughter, was then donated back again, and brought $2,100.

In total, 77 lots were sold for a total of $188,400. Once the fundraising cow's price was subtracted, the sale averaged $2,408.

Dairylea To Hold Educational Meetings

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — The state of Pennsylvania will be the site of four informational meetings held by Dairylea as part of the Cooperative's efforts in providing education to milk producers throughout the Northeast.

The meetings will feature Dairylea President Clyde Rutherford and Chief Executive Officer Rick Smith, who will be on hand to discuss the state of the dairy industry, as well as answer questions and address concerns.

A schedule of the meetings is listed below:

- Monday, March 18, 1 p.m., Best Western Country Cupboard, Lewisburg
- Tuesday, March 19, 7:30 p.m., Ramada Inn, Altoona
- Wednesday, April 10, 8 p.m., Cory Creek Golf Club, Mansfield
- Thursday, April 11, 1 p.m., Mountain View Restaurant, Clifford

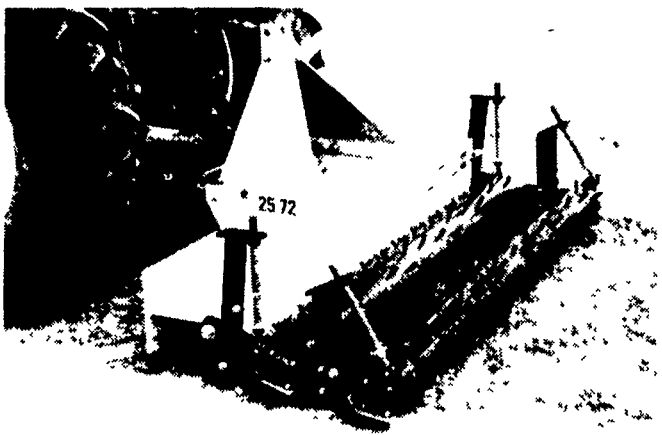

The meetings are open to everyone and are part of Dairylea's educational endeavors under provisions of Federal Marketing Order No. 2. "Sharing important, accurate information benefits everyone involved in the dairy industry," said Rutherford. Topics to be addressed include the Farm Bill, international opportunities for dairy, milk pricing and industry news. An update on Dairylea's progress and activities also will be provided.

"There has been a tremendous amount of activity and change occurring at an unprecedented pace that has affected dairy farmers and our industry," said Rutherford. "We know that our members and other dairy farmers throughout the Northeast have many concerns as they operate their dairies in the challenging environment." According to Rutherford, these educational meetings provide a valuable medium for good information and communication.

standing junior breeders. They are currently milking 230 cows at My Lady's-Manor Farm Inc.

Robert and Harold had similar starts in the registered Holstein business. Early involvements in 4-H projects led to the development of key cow families for both of them.

Each had a supreme champion in 4-H and both had a Jr. All American cow.

Early use of embryo transfer enabled Harold and Robert to develop an outstanding group of foundation females. Those foundation animals now comprise the bulk of the current Lady's-Manor herd.

Their desire was to develop a herd of cows which could satisfy the demands of any buyer they said. Currently, Lady's-Manor cattle are being merchandised around the world.

Robert and wife, Mary "Sam" Smith have two sons, Justin and Jarod, ages 10 and 9. Robert was president of the Harford County Holstein Club, and currently is a county director.

Harold and Colleen have two sons, Harold III and David, ages 13 and 10. Harold is currently a state Holstein director and show chairman.

The Joseph Schwartzbeck family, Peace and Plenty Farm, were honored with the 1995 Miss Futurity for Windy Knoll View Peace and Plenty-ET.

The next four placings in the 12th annual futurity, which was held in conjunction with the Maryland State Fair, were Cold-springs Jess Baden-ET, Marlin Hoff; Peace and Plenty Justa Pollysue, Joseph Schwartzbeck; Lady's Manor Lady Lincoln, Robert and Mary O. Smith; Lady's-Manor Jet Marke, also exhibited by the Smiths.

A distinguished service award, the A. Doty Remsburg Memorial Trophy, was presented to Bob Knutsen, registered Holstein breeder and father of three.

Bob and his wife, Ginger, along with his brother Warren, purchased their 205-acre farm in Rising Sun in 1966. They currently milk about 80 cows, and regularly merchandise offspring of the herd, including heifers and embryos to over 12 foreign countries, and bulls to four different AI centers.

Bob has always been active in many organizations. He has been a Sunday School teacher, lay leader, and administrative board chairman in his church.

He served as president of the local PTA, was a member of the county Forestry Board, and was a Select Sires director for four years. He was an officer and Board member of the County DHIA.

Bob was one of the founders of the Cecil County Farm Bureau Young Farmers, served as president of the county Farm Bureau, and in 1969 was honored as the county Farm Bureau Outstanding Farmer of the Year. He was on the Cecil County Fair board, and is currently a member of the State Fair board.

Bob has been actively involved in 4-H programs for over 40 years, first as a member, and then as a leader.

He received the Extension Pioneer award in 1989. His 4-H club, the Rising Sun Milk Squirters won the Hoard's Dairyman Judging Contest, and also the Maryland State Dairy Bowl competition.

Recipients of scholarships from Maryland Holstein breeders are, from the left, Mark Iager, Mary Ellen Seraydian, who are both students at the University of Maryland, and Greg Nnuten, a student at University of Delaware. Missing from the photograph is scholarship winner Marie Speak, a student at University of Maryland.

Bob served as an officer and board member of the Cecil County Holstein Association and started the popular Eastern Shore Showcase Sale 27 years ago. He served as president and vice president of the Maryland State Holstein Association.

He and Ginger co-chaired the Publicity and Information Committee for the National Holstein Convention in 1981, and the Maryland State Show Committee for 10 years. Bob serves as an advisor to Congressman David Rudolph.

His wife Ginger works at the University of Delaware as an administrative assistant for the Cooperative Extension Service. His eldest son, Eric, is a loan officer for the Bel Air division of Maryland Farm Credit.

His second son, Kris, just completed his master's degree in kinesiology, and is employed by Delaware State Parks. Daughter Karen is the public relations director for Semex USA East.

The convention concluded with an evening dinner and awards banquet for the youth.

Toastmaster for the evening was Lynn Ausherman, secretary-treasurer of the Frederick County Holstein Association. Guests were treated to musical selections performed by Abigail Sowers and a milk toast by State Dairy Princess Christina Harper.

Following the evening meal, Maryland youth were honored with award presentations.

New officers elected for the Jr. Club are Mark Iager, president; Jeff Sutton, vice president; Stephanie Wolf, secretary-treasurer; Dee Guyton, reporter; and Jason

Watt, historian.

Dr. J. Lee Majeskie honored Maryland's award winning dairy judging teams. The B Team, that went to Louisville, consists of Kristin Myers, Amy Iager, Emily Birch, and Erin Feuillet. The University of Maryland Judging Team members are Bobby Fogle, Sean Johnson, Mark Iager, and Marie Speak. The state 4-H Judging Team, that was the high team in the nation and is to go on to Europe consists of Chris Seymour, Mark Schnebly, Jessica Fritz, and Darren Remsburg.

Comprising the state winning FFA Judging Team are Kelly Myers, Christina Harper, Kristin Myers, and Jessica Fritz. Members of the Holstein Dairy Bowl Team, who will go on the National Holstein Convention in Texas are Darren Remsburg, Mark Iager, April Hall, Tom Mueller, and Mike Allen.

The 4-H Dairy Bowl Team, that went to Louisville has members Dee Guyton, Jeff Sutton, Jason Watt, Sara Bedgar, and Stephanie Wolf.

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

TREVOSE (Bucks Co.) — The 76th annual meeting of Dairy Council, Inc., took place Thursday at the Radisson Hotel.

The Council is a communication arm of the dairy industry, especially working with nutrition education as it deals with dairy products. A special effort is made to be scientifically accurate in the recommendations made to nutritionists and school food program administrators. Innovation, reliability, and commitment to the dairy industry and its customers was the theme of the meeting.

Dr. Patrick Kirschling, St. Joseph's University, presented an overview of marketing and drew attention to the large sums of money spent on advertising by the competitors of the dairy industry. He said $60 billion was spent by the beer and soft-drink industries, and only one-fourth of one percent of this amount was spent by the dairy industry.

Gordon McDonald, Dairy Management, Inc. (DMI), said the beverage competition is taking aim at milk, trying to push it to the back of the refrigerator. Overall consumption of milk has not changed much in the last three years, but kids' consumption has decreased. McDonald said this lower consumption of kids 6 to 11 years was significant because the market is vulnerable to lifetime habits. The decline in family willingness to make sure kids drink milk is threatening to the industry.

The Council's goal is to increase consumption. Specific programs include "Chef Combo," a Disney-like figure that visited the meeting; "Nutrition, It's elementary" that taught basic nutrition; "School Food Service" to the public schools; and adult communication that involve media presentations.

At the meeting, Robert Winner, newly-elected Council president received the gavel from Robert McSparran, past president who retired from the board last year. Winner succeeds McSparran of Peach Bottom, who served on the board for 24 years.

Winner and his wife Sue are former Outstanding Young Cooperators from Moorestown, NJ. They own and operate a 350-acre farm where they raise 325 head of Holsteins, with a milking herd of 185 cows. They have two children, Amy and Jeffrey.

The new president has also served as a director of Atlantic Dairy Cooperative since 1982, and he is on the boards of the Pennmarva Dairymen's Federation, Atlantic Processing, Inc., and Mid-Atlantic Cooperative Milk Marketing Agency.

Eckel To Step Down

He is tentatively set to take a seat on the board of directors of an insurance company that PFB sponsors - Nationwide Enterprises. He said he agreed to be nominated to the position, and, if elected, will resign as president and join the board.

It is expected that Eckel be elected to that insurance board, a compensated position, and that Donaldson will be the next president.

In addition, Eckel will resign his seat on the board of the American Farm Bureau Federation, the association of which the PFB is an affiliate.

Donaldson said that since the AFBF board of directors is limited, and he is to start his first term of office, it isn't likely that he will be immediately elected to a seat.

A special April meeting is to convene by the AFBF to nominate a new representative to its board from the Northeast.

Prior to the June board meeting, the president of AFBF is to name the next member of the farm organization's Executive Committee.

Eckel said that much remains to be done by PFB and that he will continue to stay active in support of the organization, if from a different position.

"The Farm Bureau has been my life and will continue to be a major part," he said. "And I'll continue working with PFB as a member."

He said the change is positive for Farm Bureau and that Donaldson will be good for the organization.

"He (Donaldson) is well qualified to be president, having been the members' choice to be vice president. I think members are fortunate to have Donaldson as president," Eckel said.

Donaldson is a fruit producer from Adams County, and has been a long time leader in farm organizations.

A graduate of Gettysburg High School, he attended the University of Maryland, and with his wife Betty and in partnership with sons

Steve and David and daughter Beverly Benner, farms 550 acres planted in apple, peach, and cherry trees and vegetables. The family business also operates a retail farm market from April through December.

He was first elected vice president of the Pa. Farm Bureau in November 1987 and was subsequently re-elected in 1989, 1991, 1993 and 1995.

He has served as president of the Adams County Farmers' Association, and was a director representing Franklin, Cumberland, Fulton and Adams county farmers' associations on PFB state board of directors from 1983 until elected vice president.

He also served as the first president of the PFB marketing cooperative Pennsylvania Commodity Marketing Association (PACMA), following its reorganization in 1979.

On committees, he chaired the PFB Growth Study Committee, which was given the task to develop and recommend in 1988 long-range goals for PFB programs to meet the challenges of the 1990s.

In 1988 he also was elected to a three-year term on the Penn State Board of Trustees and re-elected in 1991 and 1994.

A member of the Adams County Fruit Growers organization and the State Horticultural Association, in the past he also served a board director for the Mt. Orchard Cooperative, was a member of the Knouse Foods Cooperative, and also served as a chairman of the Pennsylvania Apple Marketing Program.

Outside of agriculture, he has served in the past as president of the Fairfield Area School Board, was president of the Fairfield Lions Club, and is currently a board member of the Adams County National Bank, is a member of the Adams County Planning Commission and also the county's Emergency Planning Commission.

A past member of the Orrtanna United Methodist Church, he is also a past Sunday school teacher and Sunday school superintendent.

Donaldson said he didn't expect his taking over leadership to cause any noticeable change in the operations of the organization.

"The challenges will not go away," Donaldson said. "They will continue to be there and I hope to continue to have support from members."

"With the change in leadership, I don't think there's going to be a transition. Hopefully it will keep moving along with little change."

For his part, outgoing president Eckel is to spend more time attending to his family business, while still being involved in agricultural issues.

He is in charge of personnel, finance and vegetable production on the farm. They produce more than 200 tons of pumpkins on 20 acres to supply chain grocery stores in the East and they also raise 500 acres of field corn, 85 acres of sweet corn, and 300 acres of wheat in rotation with the tomatoes.

He, his brother and father were presented the Pennsylvania Master Farmer award in 1982, and Keith was awarded the Jaycees' Outstanding Young Farmer Award in 1983. In other awards, he was the recipient of an honorary county agent award in 1991 from the Pennsylvania Association of County Agriculture Agents.

The purpose of the meeting with representatives from agricultural media was more than to announce the anticipated change in leadership of the PFB. It was also to provide an open forum for the discussion of some of the policies and positions of the organization.

Most recently, the PFB was not in concert with other agricultural organizations in the state as far as the 1995 Farm Bill, which is still to be resolved.

Eckel took the opportunity to say that the main reason passage of the the Farm Bill is pressed by the Farm Bureau is because of the impending planting season and the large amount of acres for which planting decisions need to be made, but can not because of uncertainties of the Farm Bill.

Some have speculated that the 1995 Farm Bill will be the last, as national political theory now holds that the nation's farming community would be better served by allowing the fluctuations of market demand control supply.

The Farm Bill proposals currently in conference committee are being heralded as the "Freedom to Farm," because it would eliminate or reduce government support payments and certain program subsidies over a relatively short time.

In general, the existing government program was designed to ensure adequate supplies of food for the nation — it has been referred to as the nation's cheap food supply program by producers; and the farmer welfare program by self-described taxpayer representatives.

The concept to avoid domestic famine by ensuring adequate supplies of affordable food to every American was to be done through support payments set at minimum levels (below cost of production in many cases) in case government-urged crop plantings, or whatever commodity was being produced, resulted in overabundance and very low prices to farmers.

This was to keep the nation's farmers in business during periods of abundance (oversupply from good weather and bumper crop) so that they would still be there producing those commodities during periods of drought or devastation without the price of the commodities getting too high.

The effect was to allow more producers to exist than would survive given what month-to-month, supply-demand production and price fluctuations would allow, not to mention unfair competition from subsidized agricultural imports.

Market driven commodity prices could be expected to fluctuate much more if producers were totally independent. However, with the advent of contract farming, it is assumed that producer income should not vary as greatly, nor would it be expected that new, independent farming starts in contract heavy commodities would arise and cause oversupply and price drops.

All of that aside, the PFB and the AFBF have urged quick adoption of a Farm Bill in order to at least allow producers to prepare properly for the growing season. For the Southern states, that time has passed, Eckel said.

But that was not Eckel's main concern in addressing policy issues sought by the PFB.

He told the group of reporters that the PFB is seeking to reinstate full funding for the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine in the 1996-97 state budget. A proposal from Gov. Tom Ridge is to reduce the amount by 27 percent, or $5.6 million.

Reinstating the full funding has to be a priority Eckel said, because of the importance of the work done by the university for the state's agricultural industry and to keep it competitive.

Eckel said that while former Gov. Robert Casey had attempted to cut funding for the university, it had been replaced after protest from the industry. He said that needs to be done again.

Eckel also said the PFB supports Senate Bill 241, a piece of proposed legislation that would create a citizen referendum on whether or not to make mandatory container deposits a law.

Pennsylvania has been one of a few holdout states in the Northeast to not implement a mandatory container deposit. Other states, such as Maine, New York, Vermont and others have had such laws in place for years to discourage the tossing of empty beverage containers along roadsides and into roadfront property.

For agriculture, the damage from broken bottles, metal and slowly decomposing materials not only causes eyesores, but threatens the safety of man, machinery and animal.

The loss of a $1,200 heifer because of ingesting glass or metal, or developing serious and life threatening infections because of cuts to legs and feet, the damage to machinery, and the threat to the landowners on their own property because of automobilized trash-tossers is unacceptable to the agricultural community and many other environmental protection organizations.

While a "bottle bill," as previous legislative attempts have been labeled, has not been able to clear

N.E. Pa. Barn Meetings Offer Opportunities For Better Barns

MONTROSE (Susquehanna Co.) — Those interested in making a tie-stall barn more comfortable and productive can attend one or more of nine barn meetings scheduled to be held at farms in an eight-county northeast Pennsylvania region.

A variety of farms were selected for the meetings so that participants can have the opportunity to see what others have or have planned to do to improve cow comfort and production.

Dr. Robert Graves, Penn State University professor of agricultural engineering, is to lead the discussion at each farm to help participants consider ideas for their own operations.

Topics to be addressed include cow comfort, barn ventilation, slot inlets, air ducts, exhaust fans, tunnel ventilation, natural ventilation, stray voltage, wiring, lighting, manure handling and safety.

Different discussions are to occur at the different farms, depending on the facilities.

The meetings are to be held the week of March 25.

Wayne County

On Monday, March 25, the meeting is to be held from 12:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. at Highland Farm, owned by Bill Bryant. The farm is in Honesdale and has a milking herd of 70 cows with a rolling herd average of 21,583 pounds of milk, 734 pounds of fat, and 700 pounds of protein.

The facilities include a combination bank barn and a newer barn with comfort stalls.

Ventilation is done with a bank of fans in an upstairs area with manually adjusted slotted inlets.

There is a new gated free-stall building for heifers and dry cows that features an open ridge and curtain sides.

For more information, call county extension agent Ed Pruss at (717) 253-5970.

Lackawanna County

On Monday, March 25, from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., a meeting is to be held at the Paul and Mark Darling Farm in Nicholson.

The Darlings milk 55 cows with a rolling herd average of 21,398 pounds of milk, 823 pounds of fat, and 699 pounds of protein.

The facilities include an older tie-stall bank barn with an attached barn for heifers and dry cows. Work was recently completed on an improved ventilation system with slotted inlets. Tunnel ventilation is to be installed.

To get to the farm, from Rt. 81, take Exit 63 and follow signs to Fleetville, a distance of about four miles. From Fleetville Corners, turn north (a right) onto Rt. 407. The barn is located about one mile from Fleetville Corners, on the right side of Rt. 407.

For more information, contact extension agent John Esslinger at (717) 963-6842.

Wyoming County

On Tuesday, March 26, from 12:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m., a meeting is scheduled to be held at DaVuc Holsteins, owned by Dave Matlocks, Tunkhannock.

The 51-cow herd has a rolling herd average of 23,467 pounds milk, 836 pounds fat, and 749 pounds protein.

The facilities include an older bank barn with 43 stanchions currently using exhaust fans and circulating fans. Also included is a new Virginia-style heifer barn with a gravity fed manure pond.

To get there from Russell Hill, located at the intersection of routes 6 and 87, take Vosburg Road (and old Dewolf's Texaco station serves as a road landmark) and proceed one mile. The farm is on the right.

For more information call extension agent Bill Pencek at (717) 836-3196.

Susquehanna County

From 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., Tuesday March 26, a meeting is to be held at the Bill and Evie Groff Farm, in Montrose.

Milking 43 cows with a rolling herd average of 20,866 pounds milk, 731 pounds fat, and 652 pounds protein, the facilities consist of an older bank barn with 41 tie stalls and ventilation with exhaust fans and circulating fans. According to a news release, the farm serves as a good example of how to install air inlets in difficult situations.

To get to the Groff farm, from Montrose take Rt. 29 north for 1.5 miles. The barn is on the right.

For more information call extension agent Nick Place at (717) 278-1158.

Sullivan County

From 12:30 to 3:30 p.m., Wednesday March 27, a meeting is to be held at the Dennis and David Hottenstein farm in rural New Albany.

The Hottensteins milk 74 cows with a rolling herd average of 21,841 pounds milk, 936 pounds of fat, and 721 pounds protein.

The highlights of facilities to see include a tie stall with comfort stalls, an aerovent ventilation system in a 40-foot by 189-foot barn built in 1984. It has a Magnet feeding system.

To get to the barn, from Overton take the New Albany/Overton Road 1 mile, or from New Albany the distance is five miles. The barn is along the left side of the road.

For more information call extension agent Rick Smith at (717) 928-9264.

Bradford County

From 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., Wednesday March 27, a meeting is to be held at the Robert and Anita Whipple Farm, in rural Towanda. The farm milks 63 cows with a rolling herd average of 20,977 pounds of milk, 759 pounds of fat and 688 pounds of protein.

The facilities include a two-row tie-stall barn with exhaust fans and wooden air distribution ducts that have been in operation for many years.

The farm is located along Sheshequin Road, which is State Route 1043. Actually located in Hornbrook, travel north on James Street across the James Street Bridge and turn left onto Sheshequin Road shortly after crossing bridge. Travel north to the farm.

Bradford/Tioga Counties

On Thursday, March 28, from 12:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m., a meeting is to be held at the Bishcroft Farm, owned by Herman Bishop, of Roaring Branch.

The farm milks 88 cows, with a rolling herd average of 22,414 pounds of milk, 866 pounds of fat and 728 pounds of protein.

The facilities are undergoing expansion. The latest addition can be easily converted from beddage pack to freestall. They are pursuing natural ventilation in this barn.

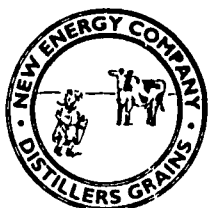

To get to the farm take Rt. 15 from Liberty and travel east on those favoring the order accounted for 40 percent of the total production voted and those opposing the order accounted for 60 percent of the production voted. In Penna. producers favored the order with 332 of 587 ballots cast. Lancaster County's producers also voted in favor of the order.

The Sheep Promotion, Research, and Information Act of 1994, which authorizes the program, provides that the order may be approved by either a simple majority of the producers, feeders and importers voting in the referendum or by those persons voting in the referendum who account for at least two-thirds of the production represented. The final order and the effective date for the program to begin will be published in a future issue of the Federal Register.

Funds generated under the program will finance promotion, research, education, and information activities designed to strengthen the sheep and wool industry's position in the marketplace.

A notice of the results of the national sheep referendum will be published in the Federal Register at a later date. Potato Growers and germinates well," said Kirk. The amount of lesions per leaf are high.

In 1995, outbreaks of late blight were controlled, despite humid weather in Michigan, according to Kirk. One reason is that even though rains came, they were short-lived and evaporated quickly, and the pathogen couldn't get started on the plants. "There was no duration of leaf wetness, lucky for us," noted Kirk.

Michigan growers took heed and listened to the reports prepared by the university. Most used various tools, including Blitecast, to plan their fungicide programs. Spraying began before the appearance of the fungus on the actual plant.

Fungicide programs that spread material uniformly and get the underside of the leaf are effective. The fungus attacks the leaves of the potato, creating a brown lesion. Tomatoes and hairy nightshade plants are also at risk. Gradually, the disease moves to the tubers, eventually causing them simply to rot and die.

The pathogen can overwinter in the tuber. Kirk showed evidence that even in cull piles at freezing temperatures, deep in the piles the fungus survives. "Culled piles are dangerous," said Kirk.

Researchers know the fungus can survive freezing temperatures, but for how long? The temperature range at which the fungus survives is wide, from below freezing to temperatures at 85 degrees. "The temperature range is absolutely frightening," said Kirk. More work is needed on the temperature survivability of the pathogen, according to the researcher.

Kirk offered tips to ensure control of the disease. Growers should select cultivars that are resistant to blight. The seedstock used should be pathogen-free. Crop rotation helps, but it is important the grower inspects the stands regularly, after planting, and use forecasting tools such as Blitecast and Envirocaster.

According to the researcher, timing and correct application of fungicides is critical. Kirk reviewed the Michigan spray program and the effectiveness of various fungicide applications. In the trials, fungicide was applied at a water rate of 50 gallons per acre at 100 psi in a seven-day preventive program.

"We have a saying in Scotland, 'If it's raining, it's a blight period,'" said Kirk.

Equipment and storage areas must be sanitized. Also, domestic gardens that neighbor a potato field can harbor the pathogen.

"We can't wait before bringing in the artillery," said Kirk. We must work to remove the stigma associated with having a late blight problem in the field, because if a grower has it, neighbors need to know. "Nothing is more important than knowing a neighbor has late blight," he said.

Air Assist

Potato growers can "provide good fungicide coverage even with lower volume applications if you use the right size droplet and right techniques" said Dr. Richard Derksen, Cornell assistant professor of engineering and pest management, to those at the institute.

Any sprayer can put fungicide on the top of the leaves. But by switching to a flat-fan sprayer and using air assist technology, canopy coverage can extend to the bottom of the leaves while using less water volume.

The water droplet size is decreased and more uniform spread of active ingredient occurs. Even better application of fungicide is achieved with the use of electrostatic sprayers, which electrically "charge" the water droplets, which fasten readily to the plant surface.

While there is no "silver bullet" of application technology, growers have a choice and that choice can determine how to improve pest management.

The key to improved fungicide application may be the use of the air-assist spraying technology, which provides a "superior" means of obtaining good application results over conventional, hollow-cone, drop sprayers.

Derksen reviewed the results of various treatments that compared various nozzle types and spray methods to control Colorado potato beetle. The results indicated that as long as some material made it to the leaf, control of the beetle was sufficient and wasn't different from differing spray technologies.

With control of fungus, the electrostatic sprayers provided more droplets per square inch and were more efficient, "even using 1/7 the spray volume of conventional sprayer," according to Derksen.

Results of the trials provide "no easy answers," said the pesticide engineer.

In 1995, these trials looked at a combination of nozzle and spraying technologies. The results showed that applicators can reduce the amount of water used to get the same coverage more efficiently by using flat fans, which provided "more uniform coverage and higher coverage than flood" techniques.

One study compared the electrostatic spraying system (ESS) with drop spraying. The ESS trial covered one acre at 4.5 gallons per acre at 30 psi in 8-inch spacing. The drop spraying was done at 20 gallons per acre at 60 psi at 43-inch spacing. Results point to a 16 percent coverage efficiency using ESS over 7 percent with the drop sprayer. Using air assist, coverage improves to 36 percent, according to Derksen.

A Wisconsin grower found that, in early blight management, best coverage came with an air-assist rig applying water at 21.5 gallons per acre.

Overall, the frequency and timing of application is most important to control insects and fungus.

Dr. Willie Kirk spoke about the challenges Michigan growers faced in the past two years with late blight outbreaks.

Somerset DHIA, Holstein Club Hold First Combined Banquet

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset County
Correspondent

BERLIN (Somerset Co.) — Some 135 persons attended the first combined, annual banquet of the Somerset County Dairy Herd Improvement Association and the Somerset County Holstein Club, held in the local community building.

Many ticket holders opted out at the last minute when yet another winter storm and frigid temperatures made driving risky on icy roadways.

Claradale Farm, Salisbury, a partnership since 1978 between Clark Yoder and Rick and Bob, his sons, took high honors in the DHIA Herd Management awards presented by Larry Hay, Pennsylvania DHIA regional supervisor.

Claradale owners may have missed attending the affair but said later they believe that registering stock reaps higher dividends in the long run — when sale time rolls around as it ultimately will for many of the animals.

They could have been echoing the words of Ken Raney who strongly emphasized that very point when he told the group, "Continue to register young stock."

There are some 75 registered Holsteins being milked at Claradale, with a herd average of 23,970 pounds. Rick says they keep an equal number of young stock.

Clark says Agri-King's feeding program is followed. As it happens, Bob is an Agri-King representative.

The soil testing, which is done by Brookside Laboratories in Ohio, Clark says is a program which correlates with DHIA.

Comfortable cows are more productive cows. That means the cows' hooves get extra attention at Claradale. "We like to have a hoof trimmer come every six months," Clark said.

Some 170 acres are reserved for corn, the primary crop raised by the partners. They depend on 145 acres for grass and 75 for oats.

Cash cropping, another aspect of Claradale's operation, according to Bob, finds marketable assets in high-moisture corn and oats. A 70 to 40 ratio puts corn on the high side of the additional 110 acres.

Other DHIA awards went to George Stahl, Somerset, RD, second; Latuch brothers, Rockwood, third; Say View Farm, Rockwood, fourth; and Michael and Carol Walker, Meyersdale, fifth.

The second urgent message Raney had for parents was their young people need to immunize their calves against brucellosis. "Vaccinated animals bring a great-er return," he said. Raney reported on local exports to Egypt and Mexico.

Rob Brown, director of the Somerset County Cooperative Extension Service reported that the junior dairy show will be held on July 16, a day prior to the Somerset County Holstein Show, so that the exhibitors can qualify to attend, on August 2, the Morrison's Cove District Dairy Show in Martinsburg.

He explained that a merger between the 4-H district dairy show and the FFA district dairy show has taken place.

The state dairy show advisory committee is now allowing anyone who is eligible to show at any district show in the state, Brown said.

Brown said the Somerset County Fair directors, because the junior dairy show was moved ahead, are currently looking at a fair without the usual dairy show. Apparently, they are batting around other possibilities, but Brown said he was unaware of their having reached a decision.

New directors elected to the county DHIA are Mark Miller, Boswell, and Wayne Petenbrink, Garrett, RD.

Elected to three-year terms in the county Holstein Club were John Fox, Rockwood; Cheryl Glessner, Berlin, and Mark Ream, Markleton.

Tim Clites, president of the

following welcoming remarks and introductions by Dr. Bob Bastian, and expressions of gratitude by dairy princess, Amy Paul.

Auction To Benefit Dover FFA, York United Way

DOVER (York Co.) — The Dover Area High School FFA will be holding an auction March 19 in the Dover High School cafeteria to benefit the United Way of York County and the Dover FFA chapter. The auction is being organized by the students of the Dover FFA chapter and their student teacher Matt Hurley who is a senior at Penn State in Agricultural Education as well as a licensed auctioneer in Pennsylvania.

The auction was planned to allow the FFA members to do community service in York County as well as allowing them a chance to improve their communication and public speaking skills. The students have really been excited about the auction and the chance to help others who are in need. The FFA is a nonprofit organization that is concerned with building confident and assertive leadership, promoting citizenship, volunteerism and patriotism in the youth of America.

The United Way funds 42 health and human service agencies in York County, touching the lives of more than 151,000 individuals in 1995 alone. The goal of the United Way in York County is to nurture children and youth, strengthen families, and foster healthy, self-sufficient adults, making our community a better place for all of us to live.

The FFA would like to invite the public to attend their auction and support the efforts of its members. The following is a partial listing of items to be sold at the auction:

NCAA football autographed by Joe Paterno, NCAA Basketball signed by the Penn State Men's basketball team, oak curio cabinet, oak child's chair, lamp, daybed, 6-foot wooden picnic table, 2-ton hydraulic floor jack, Ertl tractors, (3) Ertl truck banks, Winross truck, NASCAR collectibles, (2) wooden picnic tables, (5) oil changes, several green fees at York County golf courses, Dale Emhart clock, bird feeders and houses, horse equipment including; halter, lead, saddle blanket, and cooler blanket, computer mouse, crafts, Sunbeam weather station, allen wrench set, (2) screw

Goat Producer's Conference

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Managing the large dairy goat herd and finding profit in meat kids will be just two of the topics at the 1996 Spring Regional Dairy Goat Producer's Conference here at Penn State's Agriculture Sciences and Industry Building.

The conference is scheduled Saturday, March 30, from 7:30 a.m.-4:15 p.m.

In the morning, sessions include handling milkhouse waste, mastitis prevention and treatment, and learning to profit from buck kids. Also included are proper milking equipment and deciding on whether to join DHIA.

In the afternoon, sessions include what the American Dairy

Goat Association (ADGA) can do for the commercial dairy farmer, an overview of the milk market, managing the large herd, efficient, economic milk production, and an open forum for speaker questions and answers.

Scheduled to speak at the conference is Dr. Robert Herr, Narvon, who will provide his ideas on how to profit in meat kids. The session will include opportunities for expansion in the meat goat trade and the feasibility of a meat goat feedlot. Herr will use his experience as an operator of a meat goat feedlot to present various management techniques and the necessity for maintaining good records.

Patti Dean will offer tips on managing the large herd. Patti and her husband, Dennis, own and operate Willow Run, Inc., a dairy goat facility located in the gently rolling farm country south of Dayton, Ohio. The Dean herd includes about 400 milking head.

Rene Deleeuw, herdsman for Coach Farm in upstate New York, and George Reddick, operator of Oak Knoll Dairy in Windsor, Vt., will also speak about their experiences in managing a large herd. Deleeuw milks 400-700 goats, depending on the season. Reddick, along with wife Karen Lindbo, operate a large dairy of exclusively LaMancha dairy goats. Annual production is 200,000 pounds and they use a TMR.

Judy and Larry Schad produce milk and market their cheese under the Capriole name. Judy will speak about efficient, economic milk production.

Allison Hooper, co-founder of Vermont Butter and Cheese, and Alan Toble, from BonGrain Cheese, USA, will provide an overview of the milk market. Hooper is co-founder of Vermont Butter and Cheese with partner Robert Reese. Toble has served BonGrain Cheese, USA in a variety of operational and administrative capacities.

The conference, sponsored by the American Dairy Goat Production Association (ADGPA), costs $25 per individual, with $15 each additional registration from the same farm. A registration form is included in this issue. A boxed lunch is available for $5.

New Jersey Holstein Tour

BELVIDERE, N.J. — Rutgers Cooperative Extension, in cooperation with the Warren County Holstein Association, is sponsoring a dairy tour to the eastern shore of Maryland on Tuesday, March 26. The bus will leave at 7:00 a.m. from the upper parking lot of the Wayne Dumont Jr. Administration Building located on Route 519 one mile south of Belvidere, and will make another pickup at Rymon's Equipment, Route 31, Washington at 7:15 a.m. We will return at approximately 10:30 p.m.

We will be visiting four farms with outstanding herds and facilities:

Pintail Farm: The farm is operated by a former Warren County dairyman and Holstein enthusiast, Steve Hughes. The dairy consists of 80 top pedigree cows and beautiful facilities, which include a tie stall dairy barn and a new heifer barn. Pintail is known for its top sale consignments and embryo sales from strong cow families. The farm also boasts several other enterprises, including an aquaculture farm raised striped bass, shooting preserve and sporting clay range. The sporting clay range will be open at a cost.

Caw Croft Farm: This farm is owned and operated by Roy Crow and family. The herd consists of five cows averaging 23,000 lbs. The milking herd is housed in a free stall barn, but milked in a flat barn. This is a well managed herd consisting of strong functional dairy cattle.

Centerdel Farms: This farm is owned and operated by Jay and Laura Phipps. Amos Rudderow, former Burlington County dairyman, is the herdsman. On this farm, there are 120 cows averaging 26,000 lbs. The herd is housed in a free stall barn and milked three times a day. They are using BST and getting good results. There is a new dry cow and heifer loafing barn.

Jones Dairy Farms: This farm is owned and operated by a former Burlington County dairyman, Bucky Jones and family. The farm consists of 1200 acres and all new dairy facilities constructed in 1995. There are 600 cows averaging over 24,000 lbs. of milk housed in a free stall barn, and milked in a double 20 parallel parlor with a floating floor. The dairy facility is constructed to allow for expansion to 1,000 cows in the future. Buildings include new heifer barns, maternity ward and commodity storage.

The Directors have planned an excellent tour. Cost for the bus is $20.00 per person. Bring your lunch to eat on the bus between stops. The bus will be stopping at the Howard Johnson Restaurant for dinner, and you will order from the menu at your expense.

Contact your county extension service before Friday, March 22. Make check payable to Warren County Holstein Association.

Tioga County

On Thursday, March 28, from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., a meeting is scheduled at the dairy farm of Bill and Carol Chamberlain, of rural Convington.

The Chamberlains milk 78 cows with a rolling herd average of 20,482 pounds of milk, 752 pounds of fat, and 646 pounds of protein.

Their barn features tunnel ventilation with four 48-inch exhaust fans at one end of the barn providing winter and summer ventilation. The ventilation adjusts both manually and automatically. In addition, the farm features a milk house waste treatment system and they practice intensive grazing.

The farm is located five miles east of Mansfield. From Mainesburg, travel south on Mainesburg Road (by Anne's Store), take the second dirt road to the right called Webster Road. It is the first farm, with a large pond and a brown barn.

For more information call extension agent Craig Williams at (717) 724-9120.

Lycoming County

On Friday, March 29, from 12:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m., a meeting has been scheduled to be held at Kuhns Dairy Farm in rural Montoursville.

With a 50-cow milking string, the Kuhns Farm has a mixed herd of Holsteins and Jerseys with a rolling herd average of more than 19,000 pounds milk. To market that milk, they have their make their own ice cream and sell it in the area as Kuhns Ice Cream.

As far as facilities, they are in the process of installing a ventilation system in a stall barn with a new addition.

To get to the farm, turn east on Back Street by the Loyalsock Hotel and go a quarter of a mile to a small one-lane bridge then turn north (left) after crossing the bridge. The farm is there.

For more information about that barn meeting, call extension agent Bill Messersmith at (717) 327-2350.

political hurdles in the state Legislature for years, Eckel said that the timing is right for such a referendum.

In short, Eckel said that the bottling industry has been against such a provision because of the associated increase in costs and have lobbied well to prevent passage of such a bill.

He said it is felt that if the citizenry is given an opportunity to vote their opinion on the issue it may have the strength to override dissenting efforts by the bottling industry.

The proposal would place on the ballot of the next election following the passage of the legislation into law a referendum.

The form of the question would follow the form of, "Shall the General Assembly enact legislation, to be entitled the Returnable Beverage Container Act, which will place a nominal charge on every nonbiodegradable or nonphotodegradable (destroyed by light) beverage container of 16 ounces or less sold in this Commonwealth, with the charges collected to be returned to consumers upon return of the containers to recycling centers, retailers or beverage manufacturers?"

He said that PFB also supports increasing the state's littering fine from $300 to $1,000 and increasing enforcement. The fine has been at $300 for 20 years, Eckel said.

Given the Ridge Administration's emphasis on promoting tourism in Pennsylvania, as evidenced in part by the creation of the cabinet-level Department of Conservation and Natural Resources (DCNR) to manage state parks and bring them up to grade, it is believed that now is the time to act on getting a bottle bill.

Other issues Eckel discussed include property rights (He said his philosophy was that government owed the property owner for any potential losses due to any regulation.), and reform of local taxing authority.

Fruit Growers Meet, Twilight Meetings Announced

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — More than 44 Lancaster County Fruit Growers Association members and friends attended the annual banquet last week at The Country Table Restaurant.

Dr. Tim Elkner, Lancaster County horticultural agent, spoke about his background as an extension agent in Texas before joining Lancaster County Penn State Cooperative Extension last year.

Elkner provided some details of his work at a recent interview at his office.

What proves challenging for Elkner is the diversity of horticulture in the county, encompassing not only fruit production but vegetables and turf.

"So many areas to cover can prove really frustrating at times," he admitted, indicating the calls that come in regarding some of the seasonal pests faced by orchardists and homeowners.

A big problem during the winter are the turf "voles" that are busy, after the snow melts, eating bark off trees and eating other plants. The extension office has also fielded calls on box elder bugs, a black bag with orange or red stripes and a long, shield-like shape, that are busy seeking warmth after emergence.

Elkner will be busy winding up the meeting season in the next several weeks, speaking to Farm Women #8 and at a PennAg Industries meeting.

Elkner indicated that the Lancaster Fruit Growers twilight meeting is scheduled on May 2 at Amos Fisher's Farm in Strasburg, at 6 p.m. The York County Fruit Growers meeting is scheduled on June 4 at the Paul McPherson farm at 6 p.m.

For information on the Lancaster twilight meeting, contact Elkner at (717) 394-6851. For information on the York meeting, contact Tom Becker, (717) 840-7408.

Also, Jim Shirk, ag services manager, Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry, spoke about the opportunities for county farmers using computers and the Internet.

Officers of the Lancaster association include Tom Haas, president; Mike Hampshire, secretary; and Ken Kauffman, treasurer.

Beef Expo

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Junior activities will again take center stage at the annual Pennsylvania Beef Expo. Headlining this year's list of activities is the Skillathon, which will be held Saturday, March 30 at 7:30 a.m. at the Penn State Ag Arena.

The Skillathon is an excellent opportunity for junior cattlemen to test their beef industry knowledge and learn important skills needed to be a successful cattle producer. By incorporating project skills and industry basics in a series of mini-learning stations, participants can test their abilities in areas such as identification of beef breeds, retail cuts, feed ingredients, quality assurance practices, food safety, EPD evaluations, and management decision making. The entire contest will take approximately 35 to 45 minutes to complete, with eight minutes at each station.

To call in your registration and for more information, contact Tammy Weaver at (800) 572-2020 by March 26.

Dairylea Enters Full-Supply Agreement

Lancaster Farming, Saturday, March 16, 1996-A39

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Dairylea Cooperative Inc. has recently entered into a new, full-supply milk marketing agreement with Nestle's Fulton, N.Y. manufacturing operation.

Under their new "Value-Managed Relationships (VMR)" protocol, Nestle utilizes less suppliers but works more closely with them, strengthening relationships and ensuring the fulfillment of their supply needs.

"We are very pleased with our continually expanding relationship with a quality organization such as Nestle," said Dairylea's Chief Executive Officer Rick Smith. "This new agreement is a valuable outlet for milk from farmers in the area."

Just five years ago, Dairylea was one of many suppliers to the plant. Under the new full-supply agreement, the plant's entire supply will be provided by Dairylea member farms in Wayne, Ontario, Oswego, Oneida, Madison, Herkimer, Onondaga, St. Lawrence, Cayuga, Lewis and Jefferson counties.

Dairylea is a Syracuse-based dairy cooperative with more than 32,500 member farms throughout the Northeast. It markets nearly 4 billion pounds of milk annually and participates and is invested in a milk marketing network stretching from Maine to Maryland to Ohio.

'No Kidding' — Teacher Raises Boer Goats

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent
TYRONE (Blair Co.) —

Teaching elementary school and raising goats might not be the ideal combination, but for Cathy Hoover of Tyrone, it works.

Cathy says she can't remember a time when she didn't like goats. "My husband and I would be driving around and I would see a goat and say, "Oh Roger, let's get some goats."

"We always had sheep," says the dark haired, smiling, Warriors Mark teacher, "but we didn't have goats."

Then, one summer while visiting the state of Texas with their three children, Cathy and Roger discovered the Boer goat.

"The comparison between a Boer goat and a dairy goat is about the same as comparing a Hereford to a dairy cow," Cathy explains.

"The energy of a dairy goat goes into milk production, but the energy of a Boer goes into meat."

Roger Hoover's profession is training bird dogs. While in Texas, the family found a very reasonably priced 160-acre farm, perfect for training dogs.

"And, for raising goats," chimes in Cathy.

"I took a sabbatical and we moved the whole family to Texas for a year," she recalls. "It was a wonderful year. The school was small and the children learned a lot."

Doing some serious goat studying, Cathy and Roger learned that artificial insemination had not had enough time for good experience among Boer goats.

"When we moved back to Pennsylvania, I began looking for a Boer buck of my own," Cathy remembers. "We found one for $8,000 and that was a bargain. He paid for himself in a year."

We brought our first doe home from a goat seminar in the back of our Suburban station wagon."

Roger and Cathy raise primarily breeding stock. "There isn't much of a market for goat meat in rural Blair County," says Cathy. "However, it is popular in New York City and Washington D.C. where we have a large ethnic population, which includes eating goat meat in their religious observances."

Like lamb, the meat must be obtained while the animal is still young. The carcass should not weight more than 94.5 pounds on the hook with the ideal slaughtering weight being between 45 and 90. Meat prices run upwards of $1 per pound.

A dressing percentage according to age may serve as a guide: 8 to 10 months, 49%; two tooth 50%; four tooth 52%; six tooth 54%; full mouth 56-60% or more.

Carcasses with good conformation, covered with a thin layer of fat quality for the higher grades. Goats with too much or too little fat and weak conformation are graded lower.

Another market for the Boer goat is the leather. Quality is determined by the hair on the skin. The shorter the hair, the better the quality of the skin. Boer skins can be used for leather uppers for shoes, gloves, and book covers.

Lower in cholesterol than venison, goat meat can be served in a variety of ways. Cathy and Roger make soups, stews, and cook steaks on the grill.

Located in a picturesque wooded setting, the Hoovers own 60 acres of land and 40 goats with a few additional on the Texas acreage. Pens are dry and provide warmth

Cathy Hoover holds a newborn baby goat. She said, "My dream is to retire and just raise goats."

On a cold wintry day, Cathy feeds Boer goats, a hefty meat breed, which she first heard about in Texas and now raises in Blair County.

for those goats which give birth during the winter months. "By next year this time, we hope to have at least 150," Cathy adds. "You can raise seven to eight Boers per acre."

"It doesn't take a lot of land or good land to raise goats," she continues. "Boers can graze on almost anything and are great on nonproductive land. They love blackberries and we have a lot of them on this ridge."

Quite healthy, the Boers are considered low maintenance with vaccination costs being lower than sheep. "Treatment against internal parasites is an important expenditure," Cathy said.

Boer goats have very short hair and, therefore, do not get entangled in thorns and shrubs and rarely need protection against rain or cold.

"They birth much easier than sheep," Cathy explains. "But, they do demand attention during birthing season."

Cathy's dream is to retire and devote all of her time to the goats. "I want to get into organic farming, soap making and various other forms of getting back to nature," she adds.

Anyone wanting more information on the Boer goats can get in touch with the Hoovers at RD 3, Box 462B, Tyrone, Pennsylvania.

OMESTEAD NOTES

Ten Ways To Raise A Monster

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — You probably have seen those self tests where you find out if you're good at something or not. Here is an easy parent quiz to help you figure out if you might be raising a little monster. Write down how many times you say "yes" to these 10 questions:

1. Do you often call your child "clumsy," "slow," or other names?

2. Do you growl at your child and have a nasty tone to your voice?

3. Do you talk badly about your child in front of the neighbors or your child's friends?

4. Do you criticize what your child does when you feel it isn't very good?

5. Do you keep busy doing other things when your child wants to tell you something?

6. Do you jump in and do everything for your child because you can do it better or faster?

7. Do you make fun of or call your child names when there is an accident?

8. Do you talk "rough," "mean," or rudely to your child?

9. Do you yell or scream when your child doesn't act as quickly as you think?

10. Do you jump in with a punishment or yell "shut-up" when your child tries to explain something?

If you answered yes to any of these questions, you may be on your way to raising a little monster. Now don't get me wrong, everyone is guilty of doing any of these things at one time or another. Parents need to realize that doing these types of things, name calling, yelling, blaming, an ignoring, can hurt a child's feelings. A child's self-esteem is slowly taken away if constantly ridiculed, shamed, and made to feel worthless. The child will start acting out in bad ways only to make matters

Remember, children are great copy cats. They learn how to act from watching others, especially you. How do you keep your child from becoming a little monster? Try to set a good example by sharing your time, showing interest and listening to even little problems that might be going on. Give your child your love no matter what. You can work on the misbehaviors and love your child at the same time.

Recipe Book Increases Beef Usage

Lancaster Farming, Saturday, March 16, 1996-B3

CHICAGO, IL.—A free recipe book recently made available at thousands of retail meat cases has helped increase beef usage and generate interest in beef promotion among various manufacturers. More than 1.8 million copies of the "Beef Book of Values" were made available in 6,500 qualifying retail stores last summer.

The recipe book contained 21 new and interesting beef recipes, as well as coupons from manufacturers of products that complement beef dishes. Also in the book were suggestions on selecting and preparing various cuts of beef. Retailers qualified to distribute the book by selling increased amounts of beef during the industry's winter 1995 retail partnership featuring program.

Interviews with consumers who picked up the books in the supermarket suggested the program was highly successful. About 83 percent were moderate to heavy users of beef. Twenty percent said they would buy more beef that day as a result of having read the recipes.

Follow-up interviews indicated that more than 70 percent of the consumers had prepared at least one of the recipes in the 6-8 weeks after having picked up the book, with an average book usage of 11.2 times during that period.

Reports are coming in from B.U.C.S. owners everywhere. And they're reporting that their systems are delivering increased storage capacity, higher quality feed, faster unloading and reduced maintenance versus their old systems. Even in silos that had been retired! But don't take our word for it. Here's what your neighbor has to say about their B.U.C.S. System!

OWNER'S REPORT #54

"B.U.C.S. decreased our maintenance and increased our unloading volume. Our feeding time was cut in half! We have better quality, higher moisture feed with better haylage analysis and higher animal intake. Our nutritionist says our feeding program has turned 180° because of our better feed quality."

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

There are few more classic mid-March signs of the season.

They rank right up there with greening lawns, purple crocuses shimmering with morning dew and fat skunk cabbages pushing up through the blackish muck of woodland swamps.

Even before those, however, there were earlier previews.

A month ago, one lone dandelion poked an adventurous bloom through the scruffy grass along the path from the basement porch to the milk house door. Virtually stemless, its slightly-ragged, golden bloom hugged tight against the ground, as if afraid to venture even a fraction on an inch up into the ominous wind-chill.

At the top of its twenty-foot height, our ancient pussywillow offers heavenward a bouquet of long stems dotted with pinkish-gray catkins. Its soft, furry pre-blooms catch March's snowflakes until each is dotted with a tiny caplet of white. And in the flower borders, perennials have already begun filling in the blank spots between dormant rosebushes and ugly dead stems of last fall's lat-bloomers. None of these, however, has quite the impact of the ultimate sign.

I spotted my first for the year in meadow, on the last day of February. A perky, red-breasted robin. And then counted another 11 flockmates nearby.

Late that warm afternoon, the dog and I had stolen away to the meadow for a few months, to check how the tiny stream had weathered January's Great Blizzard - Great Flood combo.

New sandbars edged parts of the creek, strewn with tiny, colorful bits of gravel. The sides had been swept bare of the dried debris of last summer's dead grass and weeds, leaving the stream's walls undercut and vulnerable in many spots. Residue hanging high in the bushes and plant clumps along the gurgling flow gave silent evidence of the thrashing mini-river that had stampeded through the creekbed at the peak of the blizzard's overnight meltdown.

In its wake remains a longer-lasting legacy of recharged underground water levels, giving birth to springs and seeps scattered about the lowest part of the meadow. These "winter springs," as they're sometimes called, bubble up or slowly ooze underground water from the gorged supplies beneath the surface. A few weeks of warm, dry temperatures generally end their existence until the next spell of prolonged wet.

Encouraged by the extra moisture oozing across the surface and a couple of warm afternoons, grass in the flat stretch along the pasture stream had responded with an enthusiastic growth of tender new blades. And, apparently, the moisture had likewise loosened up the crop of winter-dormant earthworms.

It was across this stretch of meadow that the first robin, then another and another until I had counted an even dozen, hopped about. Hesitatingly tame, as robins often are, these stayed slightly ahead of us, but made no move to fly off. They seemed content to share the meadow, especially since neither Solomon nor I had the slightest urge to get our feet wet in the sloppy section they had claimed.

A week later, the ground surface was frozen solid and fierce winds tumbled dry snow into foot-high drifts about the barns and buildings. I worried about the robins, wondering where they had taken shelter and what they were finding to eat in these most inhospitable nesting grounds.

With the official arrival of Spring this week, maybe March's looney weather will finally settle down and properly welcome the robins for their summer stay.

WET BASEMENTS

Although it's early March, we could still have a lot of winter weather left. But the optimist in me is hoping for an early spring this year.

With spring, however, come rains and wet or even flooded basements. Some of you have already had to deal with the flooded basements this year.

What can you do to prevent wet basements? The most effective thing to do is to prevent the water from getting in to begin with. Start with the easy things to check or do. Are the gutters and downspouts clear? If not, then clean out the debris left over from last fall and the winter.

Consider installing a protective screen or other device to protect the leaves from accumulating. Icicles hanging from the gutters may have pulled them loose or bent them out of shape so that the water spills over or does not flow to the downspout.

Are the downspouts just dumping the water along the foundation? Use a splash block at the base of the downspout to prevent erosion of soil and to help direct the water away from the house.

Next check the grading around the house. The land surrounding the house should slope away from the foundation to direct the water away from the house. From the foundation to approximately six feet away, the surface should slope away at the rate of 1 inch per foot. The remainder of the yard should slope away at the rate of at least one foot per 25 feet.

Window wells should extend at least two inches above ground level, with the well bottom constructed to permit good drainage.

Any low spots that pond water within 10 feet of the basement wall should be filled or surface drainage provided. Decorative borders or edging around foundation plantings often trap and hold water against the foundation or divert it into the window wells. Proper drainage should be provided.

Driveways, sidewalks, and patios should slope away from the foundation because of the amount of runoff they accumulate.

If a home is adjacent to land higher in elevation, it may be necessary to divert the runoff by a grass-lined ditch or terrace.

Problems caused by subsurface water are generally more serious in nature and frequently require professional assistance. Quite often subsurface water that is putting pressure on basement walls must be removed by a subsurface drain. Generally, the drain should be at least four inches in diameter and covered with several inches of gravel. It may be possible to construct the subsurface drain in such a way that it empties on the surface.

For damp spots in the basement that are not condensation, the wall can be painted inside with a waterproof cement paint. If possible, it should be applied when there is no active leakage through the wall. Existing cracks should be filled before painting.

For severe problems, the most effective water proofing treatment is one which goes on the outside of the house. Unless installed during construction, however, digging a trench around the house to install a waterproof membrane or coating can be both expensive and dangerous. Water that makes its way to the foundation can push up against the membrane, but the foundation wall is behind it preventing the water from pushing its way through. On the other hand, a waterproofing coating or membrane installed in the inside has only air on the other side. It is, therefore, generally effective only for minor leaks.

Another approach is to accept the fact that the water is going to get into the basement and to put a channel around the perimeter wall of the basement directing the water to the sump pump.

For minor problems, a dehumidifier may be sufficient. For a dehumidifier to work effectively, it should be located in an enclosed room or area so that a constant new supply of humid air is avoided. Provide adequate space for air to circulate around the dehumidifier. The capacity of a dehumidifier is measured in pints of water removed from the air in a 24 hour period. Select a dehumidifier with a capacity appropriate to the room size and degree of dampness.

Each situation has its own set of unique conditions. Every homeowner can inspect his or her basement, foundation, and surface drainage to identify the likely cause of the problem. Many problems with wet basements can be dealt with through a few simple preventative measures.

Doughnuts For Every Taste

The name doughnut is thought to be derived from early doughnuts, which were made from dough shaped like nuts. Today, a doughnut is generally believed to be a small cake of sweetened yeast dough, usually ring-shaped, and fried in deep, hot fat.

But doughnuts may be baked or made in a special doughnut machine. They are sometimes made with baking powder or baking soda instead of yeast. And, as a time-saving method, doughnuts may be made from refrigerated dough. Here is a variety of doughnuts to satisfy everyone's taste.

FROSTED PUMPKIN DOUGHNUTS

2 eggs
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons orange juice
2 tablespoons butter, softened
1 cup canned pumpkin
4 cups sifted all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
Evaporated milk
Oil for frying
3 cups confectioners' sugar
Beat eggs, sugar, and butter in large bowl of electric mixer. Beat in pumpkin. Sift together flour, baking powder, soda, salt, cinnamon, and nutmeg. Add lemon juice to evaporated milk.

Add dry ingredients to egg-sugar mixture alternately with one cup evaporated milk, beginning and ending with dry ingredients. Blend well after each addition. Cover; chill 2 hours. Turn dough out on well-floured pastry board or cloth. Knead 5 or 6 times. Roll dough to ¼-inch thickness. Cut with floured doughnut cutter. Fry in 375-degree oil until golden, about 3 to 4 minutes, turning once. Drain on absorbent paper. Beat together until smooth confectioners' sugar, grated orange rind, orange juice, and 1 tablespoon evaporated milk. Frost doughnuts while warm. Yield: 2 dozen.

BUTTERMILK DOUGHNUTS

2 eggs, beaten
1½ cup sugar
Cooking oil
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1½ teaspoon baking soda
¼ cup milk
¼ cup buttermilk
1 cup confectioner's sugar
Combine eggs, sugar, and 2 tablespoons oil. Mix together next five ingredients. Combine 2 mixtures in mixer bowl. Add milk and buttermilk; mix thoroughly with electric mixer. Preheat doughnut machine for 10 minutes. Add batter. Add ¼ teaspoon oil to each circular cavity at top of unit within first 2 minutes of baking time. Bake for 5 minutes or until oil no longer bubbles for crispier doughnuts. Add ½ cup boiling water gradually to confectioner's sugar; mix well. Dip warm doughnuts into warm glaze. Yield: 20 servings.

Pa. Alternate Dairy Princess

DOUGHNUTS

2 cups plain mashed potatoes
1 cup sugar
½ cup margarine
½ cup butter
2 beaten eggs
1 tablespoon salt
5 pounds bread flour
1 quart milk, scalded
3 packages yeast
¼ cup warm water
Mix together mashed potatoes, sugar, margarine, and butter. Add scalded milk. Cool mixture; meanwhile dissolve yeast in warm water. Add potato mixture when cool. Stir in 4 or 5 cups flour and let set for 20 minutes.

Add eggs and salt. Work in remainder of flour, going easy on the last pound.

Let rise until double in size. Roll out dough and cut into doughnuts. Let rise again. Fry in deep fat at 350 degrees until golden brown on both sides. Makes approximately 90 doughnuts.

Bake until golden brown 8-10 minutes at 425 degrees. Mix together half cup sugar, 1 teaspoon cinnamon. Brush entire doughnut with melted butter; dip in sugar mixture, coat all sides. Serve warm or glaze.

2 eggs
4 cups sifted all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
Cooking oil
Heat milk in small saucepan on medium until bubbles form around edge of pan; remove from heat. Add sugar, salt, and butter. Stir until butter is melted. Let cool to lukewarm. In large bowl of electric mixer, sprinkle yeast over warm water, stir to dissolve. Add milk mixture, eggs, 2 cups flour and nutmeg. At medium speed, beat until smooth, about 2 minutes. With wood spoon or hands beat in remaining flour until smooth. Cover with towel, let rise in warm place until doubled in bulk. Punch down dough, turn onto well-floured pastry cloth. Knead 10 times until dough is smooth. Cover with bowl. Let rest 10 minutes. Roll out dough one-half-inch thick. Cut with floured doughnut cutter. Cover with towel, let rise until doubled in bulk.

In heavy skillet or saucepan, slowly heat shortening (2-3-inches deep) to 375 degrees. Gently drop doughnuts 3 or 4 at a time into hot fat. Fry until golden brown on both sides. Remove doughnuts and drain well on paper towels. Sugar or glaze if desired.

These take awhile to make since I usually double or triple the recipe. They are good to make on a rainy or cold day. Sure do taste good after the work.

Real Butter On Internet

ROSEMONT, IL — Welcome to ButterNet! A new, interactive site for real butter lovers is scheduled to appear on the World Wide Web section of the Internet under the address <http://www.realbutter.com> on March 18.

The site, sponsored by the American Dairy Association (ADA), will become a resource for information, recipes, tips and cooking techniques for those who prefer to cook with butter.

Mary Bergin, head pastry chef at Spago, an upscale chain of restaurants in locations such as Los Angeles and Las Vegas, serves as an on-line celebrity guest to the site.

"The past fourteen years of my life have been dedicated to the art of creating luscious desserts. Of course, I would never use anything but butter," said Bergin. "From my perspective, the ButterNet site not only offers a wonderful combination of delectable recipes and nostalgic dishes, but also keen insight into the art of creating cooking with butter."

ButterNet Site Sections include:

RealButter Recipe Extravaganza - More than two dozen, easy-to-make recipes from appetizers and brunches to "Gourmet" main courses.

Who Has Seen The Wind?

Wind is a powerful force of nature. At times it can barely be felt. At other times, it can smash down buildings and uproot trees. Wind can be both helpful and destructive to man.

Winds are named from which direction they blow. North winds blow from the north to the south. East winds blow from east to west.

Wind occurs when one part of the earth heats up more than another part. For example, hot areas expand and rise while cooler air flows in to replace the heated air. This is called circulation.

At the Equator, air rises into the upper atmosphere and flows away from the Equator. When it returns to the earth, they form six kinds of winds, three in the Northern Hemisphere and three in the Southern Hemisphere. Polar Easterlies blow east to west near the North and South Poles. Prevailing Westerlies blow from west to east between the 30 degree and 60 degree latitudes in both hemispheres. These carry out weather eastward from the western side of the United States. Winds near the Equator are called trade winds because sailors once relied on them to move their merchant ships.

All About March

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

March is named after the Roman god of war, Mars. The vernal equinox, which occurs on March 20 or 21, marks the beginning of spring. The sun is directly over the equator on this day. Many plants and animals awaken during March. Bears, chipmunks, and woodchucks come out of hibernation. Frogs lay their eggs. Pussy willows and wild flowers first appear. Many people begin to look for the first robin of spring.

Although there are no national holidays in March, many celebrate St. Patrick's Day, and many observe Lent. Many say that March comes in like a lion and goes out like a lamb, or visa versa.

But no matter which it does, March is the windy month when many like to fly kites.

Storms

Air flows towards low-pressure regions are called cyclones. Winds produced from the heating of land in summer and the cooling of land in winter are called monsoons. They blow in from the ocean in summer and out from the land in winter. A local wind that whips down a mountain in western United States is called a chinook.

Good Wind

A windmill spins because of the wind. Most are used to pump water or to make electricity. Windmills were first used around A. D. 600 in Iran. They were mainly used to grind grain.

Dutch windmills in the Netherlands were used to drain water from the land. Windmills were used in the United States during the 1800's and early 1900's. Generating plants built in the 1930's replaced many windmills. Interest in air power was renewed in the 1970's because of the oil shortage.

The pigs weaned per sow per year record was topped by Kevin Rohrer with 20.88. In the hog feed conversion category, Barry Siegrist took the trophy for his record of 3.12 pounds grain.

The poultry layer production award went to Larry Hershey for an average of 2.43 pounds of feed per dozen eggs.

Officers for 1996 are Vernon Heisey, president; John Hess, vice president; Dave Hernley, treasurer; Ken Nolt, assistant treasurer; Ed Sensenich, secretary; Dwight Rohrer, assistant secretary; Jay Deiter, public relations; and Charles Ax III, adviser.

Youth Opportunities For Summer

DOYLESTOWN (Bucks Co.)

— What happens when you mix three Pennsylvania Service Scholars from Delaware Valley College, Bucks County Cooperative Extension's 4-H programming, a donated barn from the Christ Home facility in Warminster, and 30+ community kids and parents?

The answer is a successful 4-H Youth Program that's providing urban/suburban youth with hands-on activities including: raising market hogs, raising dairy calves, and growing vegetables, popcorn and pumpkins in a community garden.

In 1994, Celeste Ball, Penn State Cooperative Extension agent from Bucks County and Dorlisa Minnick, community service coordinator from Delaware Valley College put their heads together and submitted a grant proposal to the Pennsylvania Service Scholars Program (administered by AmeriCorps), in the hopes of providing a funding source to begin a community outreach program that would provide animal science and horticulture activities for community youth.

An additional grant proposal was submitted to the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Youth Grants Program to provide for the much needed equipment and tools to start the program. Both grant proposals were funded. The first grant was for the training of three Service Scholars (college students) to serve as the project coordinators for a market hog project, a dairy calf project, and a gardening project over the next two years. All the start up equipment needed to operate the three component pilot program was funded by a grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

In addition to providing the Service Scholars Jennifer Rishel, dairy leader, Dwayne Murphy, market hog leader, and Jessica Schaub, gardening leaders, the Delaware Valley College of Agriculture loaned the dairy calves for the dairy project members and also allowed youth the select their market animals from some top notch pigs bred by DVC.

The program began on April 1, with the delivery of the 14 market hogs and was followed in two weeks by the arrival of the four dairy calves. The new 4-H members and parents began participating in a true learning experience as they cleaned and bedded animal pens before they fed and watered the various animals on a rotating schedule.

There were 14 youth that took on a market hog project, nine who participated in the dairy calf project and 10 who helped to work in the garden.

The calf project was the brain storm of Jennifer Rishel, a sophomore in dairy science at Delaware Valley College. Jenn wrote and submitted a proposal to the dairy department asking the college to "lend" four registered Holstein dairy calves to the 4-H members for the duration of the project which ran from April through August. During that time, the 4-H members assumed responsibility for the care and maintenance of the calves under the direction and guidance of Jennifer. Jenn provided the dairy expertise. She led the 4-H'ers through basic animal care tasks as well as teaching them how to halter break and lead the animals. She explained the dairy industry and the importance of milk processing. Jenn helped them to get ready for showing the animals at the local Middletown Grange Fair.

The swine project was led by a junior at Delaware Valley College, Dwayne Murphy. Dwayne arranged for the 4-H'ers to purchase their animals directly from the livestock program at the college and a local hog producer. Under the direction of Rod Gilbert and George Gross (farm managers and animal science instructors at the college) the kids selected their market hogs. The hogs were raised by the group of 4-H'ers. They rotated on a weekly chore schedule. For first time 4-H market hog project member Dennis Lipshultz, the experience netted him Reserve Champion Hog honors at the Bucks County 4-H Swine Show and Sale for his prize winning pig.

Jessica Schaub, a sophomore horticulture major at the college, worked hard at developing the garden and making it a fun project for the kids. Jessica wrote to many companies to get donated seed and plants for the garden. With the help of parents and 4-H members, garden crops were harvested and entered at the Middletown Grange Fair as well as donated to a local soup kitchen. Youth harvested mini popcorn, Indian corn, beans, tomatoes, and potatoes.

The trio of Service Scholars was assisted in their endeavors by Dorlisa Minnick, Community Service Coordinator at Delaware Valley College, Mike Fournier — Agriculture Agent and Celeste Ball — 4-H/Agriculture Agent — Bucks County Cooperative Extension, parents and community partners, as well as The Christ Home facility in Warminster which donated the barn site.

"The program was a lot of work for everyone including the parents who made sure the kids were able to get to the site. Parents also had to help with some of the heavy barn chores. This is a perfect example of everyone pitching in to make the program a success. I know everyone learned something!" said Celeste Ball.

"This was a wonderful learning experience for my daughter. I grew up on a farm in Gettysburg, and I never dreamed that as an apartment dweller, living in the middle of Warminster, my child would have the chance to experience what I had (experienced) growing up on the farm. It was great!" — Carol Hopkins, a participating parent.

"I think you get a lot healthier respect for the food that you eat. I think that's the real learning experience ... to know how much work a farmer has. You know, we buy it in the store and we never realize what it takes to get that product ready for us. Even milk from the cow!" — Marcy Buchner, a participating parent.

After a hectic, though successful first year, plans are to continue the program. There will be a committee of parents and Extension staff developed to carry on the program. There is funding for the Service Scholars to participate for one more year and we are hoping that other college students will volunteer their time and expertise to help the 4-H'ers with their projects. It's a great outreach project for Delaware Valley College and Penn State Extension.

Future plans include the addition of rabbit and market lamb projects in 1996. The barn needs the following: window repairs, adding a watering system, providing a small fenced area for the 4-H'ers to be able to work safely with the animals, and cleaning out the top of the barn for feed storage.

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff
LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) —
While no amount of wishing will bring spring quickly, planning for it makes these long winter months a bit more bearable.
Recently Deb Hartman taught a class at the Lebanon County

Extension office on "Starting Seeds Successfully Indoors."
For those who want to make sure their seedlings survive outdoors, Hartman provided a whole list of factors that must be considered before planting seeds.
One of the most important factors to consider is the planting soil.

Using garden soil for indoor planting is taboo because it will crust and dormant weeds, fungi, and disease may choke new seedlings.
Soil that allows good drainage but will hold some moisture is necessary. Hartman shared several soil mixes that she prepares. Formulas for these mixes are included at the end of this article. Planting soils are also available for purchase from gardening centers.
It is important to know the soil pH, and to adjust soil additives to accommodate the plant's preference.
Most vegetable plants need a medium to high pH soil.
Seedlings need a lot of fertilizer so if you are purchasing fertilizer, all three numbers would be equal for the nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium.

The soil can be perfect, but the plants will fail if they are planted too early before outdoor trans-planting. Ideally, seeds should be planted four to 12 weeks, depending on the plant, before the last frost. If seeds are planted too early, they will become "leggy" or "spindly" and more prone to disease.

In this area, May 11 is considered the last frost date for the area.
That doesn't mean that frost is never reported after that date, but generally the weather is safe after that date. Low areas may experience frost when higher elevations do not.
Planting valuable or very large plantings of frost-sensitive crops should be delayed to be on the safe side. On the other hand, it may be worth gambling on an early last frost with limited plantings of certain crops to get a jump on the season.
To determine when seeds should be planted, count backward from the May 11 date to the approximate time to seed before the last spring frost.

Begonia, browalia, geranium, larkspur, pansy, and vinca should be seeded 12 weeks before frost.
Dianthus, impatiens, petunia, portulaca, snapdragon, stock and verbena should be planted 10 weeks before frost.
Ageratum, alyssum, broccoli, cabbage, cauliflower, celosia, col-eus, dahlia, eggplant, head lettuce, nicotiana, pepper, and phlox should be planted eight weeks before frost.
Aster, balsam, centurea, marigold, tomato, and zinnia should be planted six weeks before frost.
Cucumber, cosmos, muskmelon, squash, and watermelon should be seeded indoors four weeks or less before the May 11 date.

- Steps to follow for planting seeds:
- Wash containers in hot soapy water with nine parts water to one part bleach.
 - fill container with soil
 - press down with finger to work out air space.
 - water
 - plant seeds 2-3 seeds spread in each container
 - tamping-press down to contact soil.
 - sprinkle a little soil on top
 - thin by cutting rather than pulling out to prevent disturbing root system.
 - tamp down gently
 - mist top of soil

- Some seeds need light and others germinate in dark. Check seed packets for instructions. If light is needed, never cover the seeds with soil.
- The seed trays should be placed at a window or under florescent lights.
 - Cool 40 watt florescent lights work as well as grow lights and are more economical.
 - Keep lights on until plant germinates, then turn off for 6-8 hours every 24 hour period.
 - Mist throughout the day or top water with small spout.
 - After germination, lots of light is needed.
Temperatures should be kept at 65-70 degrees during the day and 55 to 60 degrees at night.
Seedlings need 16 hours of light daily.
 - Lights should be placed 4-6-inches above plants.
 - Keep growth constant. If growth stops, the plant will suffer a setback.
 - When the plant has three leaves, they are ready to be transplanted. Use a screwdriver to ease out plant if soil is moderately dry. Plant seedling the same way as the seed had been planted but do not water until seedling is transplanted. Use soil line in transplanting.
 - Two to four weeks before the plant will be transplanted into the garden, toughen up the plant by exposing plant to outdoor sun, starting with one hour a day and increasing the amount each day.

Here are the formulas for soil mixes, which Hartman recommends:

- CORNELL MIX
for seedlings and houseplants
4 quarts horticultural grade vermiculite
4 quarts shredded peat moss
1 tablespoon superphosphate
2 tablespoons ground limestone
4 tablespoons cow manure or bonemeal

- SOIL BASE MIX
for outdoor containers
1 cubic foot topsoil
1 cup foot vermiculite
1 cup foot peat moss
1 quart dried cow manure
½ cup ground limestone
1 cup dried blood
1 cup bonemeal

- SOILESS MIX
for outdoor containers
5 cubic feet ground bark
5 cubic feet sand
5 cubic feet peat moss
1 pound, 10 ounces 5-10-10
2 pounds ground limestone
½ pound iron sulfate

Selecting Seed For Spring Lawn Seeding
YORK (York Co.) — Spring is just around the corner and with it an abundance of advertisements for lawn, landscaping, and garden products hitting the newspapers and Sunday magazines. Some homeowners will be wanting to plant some grass seed this spring. Although grass seedings usually turn out better when done in the fall there are occasions when spring seedings are necessary such as with new construction or repair of areas damaged the previous year that were not taken care of in the fall.

The key to successful spring grass seeding is to get it done as early as the weather and soil conditions permit so that the grass can get up and growing before the negative effects of hot and dry weather and weed competition take place. Proper soil preparation, soil amendments, seeding and mulching should be done in order to increase the odds of success.

Assuming all the preparation is done properly and a good stand of grass is established, the key to long term success goes back to the selection of a good high quality seed product. While there are many good seed products to choose from there are also many poor one that can be found on store shelves that are very appealing because of the low price. In addition there can be products that are quite inferior that are advertised in such a way that one would think of it as a miracle product. To further try to convince the consumer that the product is something special they price it extremely high. The key is to find out what the actual contents of the seed mixture consists of. In a store this would be found on a tag on the box or on a bulk bin. For mail order products you will probably have to call the company to get this information ahead of time.

When checking on the contents of the seed product, remember to check that the germination date is current. Check the percentage of viable seed, the amount of inert material, other crop seed and whether or not it contains any noxious weed seeds. Read on the tag what type of grass (species) are contained. Be sure it contains the type of grass that is adapted to the conditions you will be growing it under. Check what the names of the varieties are. Chances are if the variety name is not stated, the performance of the grass will be inferior to other improved, named varieties.

It has been said that there will always be a market for poor quality grass seed. If you are looking for something that will keep the dust down there are grass seed products available to meet that need. If you are more interested in a long lasting, better looking grass with fewer problems there are products available for that also. Be an informed consumer before you buy. Ask questions. Read seed tags. Don't take brand name reputation for a guarantee of quality.

Information on selecting grass seed is available from the Cooperative Extension office. Call (717) 840-7408 and ask for the Extension circular numbers 391 — Turfgrass Seed and Seed Mixtures and 395 — Turfgrass Species For Pennsylvania.

Ida's Notebook
Ida Risser

Our youngest daughter and her family have lived in Texas almost three years. We've finally decided to fly down and visit them. Two of our other children offered to take us to the Philadelphia Airport and then pick us up six days later. We really appreciate their volunteering.

Now I must decide whether we should take winter or spring clothes. And, we must make arrangements for someone to get our mail and feed the cats and goldfish. I'm hoping my plants won't get too thirsty as the sun shines brightly in at the two big bay windows.

It is so easy to get into a routine of daily living and not particularly look forward to an upheaval. But, I know that a pleasant visit will be planned for us. Even seeing the one-year-old grandson again should be an incentive to travel.

This winter I've enjoyed reading some short stories by well-known authors. Now I have started a book written by Pearl Buck in 1936. I think it should be as interesting now as when it was written. It tells about her mother's life in China.

When I look through the new garden catalogs, I find too many things that I'd like to try. Maybe I'll try round zucchinis as I had none last year. Some years I have a big crop of leeks and other years I do not even plant any.

However, flowers are my weakness as I could order a dozen kinds without even trying. So far my hollyhocks have not done very well for me as I only have a few. This year I want to try straw flowers and statice again as it has been years since I raised them. I'm also planning to plant more dwarf varieties of zinnias, snap dragons and cosmos. In our soil they grow too tall and they have to be staked.

Thanks & Congratulations To

HARNISH BROS. Washington Boro, PA

ANSWER — Requests about soap making constantly pop up in the question and answer column. Numerous readers respond often with interesting tidbits of information related to soap making.

Here is an interest expose sent in by Irvin Filler who lives in

How To Make French Soap

The early French fur traders and trappers were the best soap makers because they brought with them the art of extracting perfume to scent soap. Soap can be made from any grease such as deer fat, beef suet, lard, and bear fat.

This example describes using lard as the grease.

Take 10 pounds lard. If you desire to perfume the lard, spread the lard about one-inch thick on wooden boards. Place the boards in a building or sheltered outside spot. Take the blossoms of any strong smelling flowers and stick them into the lard as close together as possible. Do not cover them with the lard just stick them well into the lard. Leave the flower blossoms in the lard for 24 hours, then remove the blossoms.
Repeat if you desire a stronger perfume odor. This is the same method used to make perfume in France. In perfume making the lard is distilled to extract the perfume.

If you desire a pine odor to your soap, boil pine needles slightly in soft water and use the water in place of regular soft water as described further on.

Now take the 10 pounds of lards and place it in a kettle with two quarts soft water or two quarts pine water. Bring to a boil.
Then remove the kettle and set it aside to cool for 10 to 12 hours or overnight.

Any dirt or meat particles will settle out and sink to the bottom of the kettle. Now take 4 tablespoons sugar, 2 tablespoons salt, 6 tablespoons powdered borax, 1/2 cup ammonia, and mix well into 1 cup soft water or pine water.

Go outdoors and mix 2 quarts of cold soft water or pine water into 2 cans of Lewis Lye in a granite dish. Stir well. Be sure you use cold water to mix into the lye. If you use hot water the lye will fume up and explode causing bad burns or blindness. The lye will cause the water to become hot. Leave the lye and water mixture cool down to lukewarm.

Take the sugar, salt, borax and ammonia mixture and pour it into the cooled lye and water mixture. Add the cool lard. Stir well with a wooden paddle and use a granite pan or kettle. Stir until honey-colored. Cut the soap into squares before it becomes completely hard. If you desire the soap in other shapes, place a piece of the soap in two piece wooden or metal molds and squeeze to the desired shapes.

This soap is very good for a face, hand, and body soap as well as washing dishes and clothes.

Harriet Higgins also sent in a soap recipe. She recommends reading about soap making.

She writes, "It is pretty tricky because many times, it doesn't turn out and can be disheartening. I can recommend three books."

Here is a listing of the recommended books: "Soap: Making it Enjoying it," by Ann Bramson, published by Workman Pub.
Co. Inc., 708 Broadway, New York, NY 10003.

published by Tab Books, Blue Ridge Summit, PA 17294.

lished by Rodale Press, 33 E. Minor St., Emmaus, PA 18098.

Harriet writes that she would be happy to answer questions regarding soap making. Call her at (410) 848-0637.

Eileen Fabian Wheeler
Assistant Professor
Ag Engineering

What type of fan accessories are important for proper fan function? How do these accessories impact fan performance?

Typical accessories installed on a poultry building ventilation fan include a guard, which prevents things from contacting the blades, and shutters which seal closed the fan opening when that fan is not in use.

Guards should always be installed for safety reasons and shutters are used on either the inside or outside of most fans. Fans may have input or discharge cones for improved air flow efficiency.

Layer house fans are often installed under large hoods that are constructed for minimal interference with air flow.

This article will be concentrating on negative pressure mechanical ventilation system fan accessories that are installed on the fan and its housing.

Fan accessories are necessary for proper functioning of the fan as part of a ventilation system but often reduce air flow and efficiency. Shutters will reduce fan air flow by 10 to 25 percent, which is a very significant loss. Shutters placed on the outflow or discharge side of fans are particularly detrimental.

Air exiting the fan blades is circulating strongly in a spiral pattern, but external shutters then disrupt this fast-moving, circulating air with horizontal shutters. Shutters on the inlet side of fans are less

This and other fact sheets are available from: Agricultural and Biological Engineering Extension, 246 Agricultural Engineering Bldg., Penn State University, University Park, PA 16802, phone (814) 865-7685.

Inlet air flow is in a more streamlined, low velocity pattern that the shutters only minimally disrupt. There would be a 10 to 15 percent air flow improvement in using internal rather than external shutters.

Shutters have been traditionally installed on the discharge side of fans to prevent precipitation from damaging fan components. Considering the large decrease in air flow caused by discharge side shutters, this tradition needs to be reconsidered in many applications.

For example, a hooded layer house fan is already protected from precipitation and would benefit from internal rather than external shutters. For more exposed fans, discharge cones can provide adequate protection from weather in many cases.

Agricultural fans are designed and manufactured with an assumption that they will be operating under moist conditions and are well sealed against the elements. In most cases, there is significant benefit to be gained from installing shutters on the inside of the fan.

Some fans may not need shutters at all. For stage one, minimal air flow fans that are operated continuously all year-round, shutters can be removed to promote better air flow. For additional staged fans, which are needed only in warm or hot weather, shutters are necessary to seal the fan opening

PatZ

Manufactured in Pound, Wisconsin

Here is something often overlooked...

Only Patz gives you 45 years of experience with hook-and-eye chain, resulting in a chain so good that others are attempting to copy it.

Many Patz Gutter Cleaner chains are still working well after more than 30 years of use.

After the Patz patent on hook-and-eye chain expired, some other companies have attempted to copy the Patz chain. Some promote 10- and 12-year warranties on chain—but they have not yet had 10 or 12 years of experience with hook-and-eye chain.

Patz has continued to improve its chain for 45 years with special-formula steel, special forging techniques and special steel hardening processes.

Rely on the proven, long-life chain. Patz provides a 15-year chain warranty because so many chains are working well long after 15 years of use.

Better yet, your Patz chain warranty is backed up by a solid, reliable company that has been serving farmers for 45 years with the same family ownership.

Insist on Patz chain!

What thousands of dairyman know: Patz chain is your best buy!

when the fan is not in use. Without a shutter, fan openings will act as an inlet and hence disrupt the ventilation system air flow and static pressure.

Another common fan accessory is a guard which is essential for the safety of people and animals around the fan. A guard also prevents objects from damaging or entangling the fan. Guards do not disrupt air flow nearly as much as shutters. A guard may decrease air flow and efficiency by less than 5 percent. Ring guards, with a concentric circular wire grill, disrupt air flow less than interwoven wire mesh guards.

Fans with well designed housing and inflow and discharge cones have improved efficiency. Well-designed fan housings have close tolerance between the fan blade tip and the housing surrounding the blades. This discourages back flow of air through the fan and hence improves air flow efficiency.

Streamlined air flow into the fan blades is desirable. Inflow cones provide a short duct of streamlined air, which improves fan operating efficiency. Discharge cones provide a similar function but are less effective in improving fan efficiency than inlet side cones.

Table 1 shows rated fan performance data essential in selecting fans for a well designed ventilation system, comparing a bare fan and the same fan with guard and shutters in place. When these data are graphed, the curves show the characteristics of fan air delivery at various operating static pressures (Figure 1).

Note that the decrease in air flow from fan accessories is important to account for in system design. Design air flow will not be met if accessories are ignored. Consider a layer house where a set of 10 stage-one 36-inch fans were installed with external shutters, yet the decrease in air flow these shutters caused was not accounted for in specifying the type and number of fans. The building was 20 percent underventilated when the stage-one fans were operating at full capacity.

The recommendation was to position the shutters on the inside of the fans to improve performance. In practice, these continuously operating, stage-one fans would never be turned off, so there would be no need for shutters. The shutters could be removed for even better air flow performance.

What kind of accessories will an agricultural fan need?

A fan needs a guard for safety of animals and workers and to protect the fan from damage. Shutters are necessary on most fans and are best installed on the inside of the fan for less air flow disruption. Well designed fan housing construction will improve efficiency and is found on most engineered fans. For improved fan performance, inlet cones are more effective than discharge cones. The minimum accessories are a guard and shutters on a well designed fan.

It is important to remember that ventilation is a system. The fan is only one component which performs an important function of creating the static pressure difference which drives the ventilation air exchange.

Inlet and air distribution components have a tremendous effect on the success of a ventilation system. Fan and equipment selection should use data from rated fans which have been tested in conditions under which they will be operated and with the necessary accessories such as guards and shutters. In this way, you can be assured of obtaining your system's ventilation air exchange rate.

The One Spreader Rugged Enough For Lime, Precise Enough For Fertilizer.

You know how tough it is to spread wet lime. And fertilizer is too expensive to waste. Our new 56i spreader does both jobs with ease. Plus, it has no equal when it comes to spreading "sloppy" material.

Stoltzfus Spreaders have been known as unique, "top-of-the-line" ag spreaders since 1947.

- Press-wheel ground drive
- Walking-beam suspension
- Corrosion-proof steel hopper
- UHMW plastic floor
- Lime: 3 tons / acre max.
Fertilizer: 125 lbs. / acre min.

Farmers are still using Stoltzfus Spreaders they've had 20 years or more. That means your investment in a versatile Stoltzfus Spreader will add up to a very smart buy indeed.

Safety Education Resources Difficult To Locate

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — What do National FFA Organization advisers use to teach agricultural safety and health to their students? Whatever they can get their hands on.

So say the 118 advisers whom Partners for a Safer Community surveyed at the 1995 National FFA Convention in Kansas City last fall. The visiting teachers responded to the eight-question "Agricultural Safety Education Survey" at the Partners for a Safer Community Career Show booth on Nov. 8 - 10.

Partners for a Safer Community program is a growing collaborative effort to compile and distribute youth-oriented agricultural safety and health education resources to teachers and community leaders in the United States. As a special project of the National FFA Foundation, the program also provides youth leadership opportunities and community development information in the area of agricultural safety education for children.

According to Julie Sessions, director of Partners for a Safer Community, survey results show advisers rely on the cooperative extension system and private industry for most of their safety education information. The advisers tend to learn about new materials at conventions, exhibits, meetings, and seminars.

"However, many respondents noted they experience difficulty in locating appropriate resources to use in the classroom," said Sessions. "When I asked these individuals what kinds of materials they used and what they found most helpful, it was not uncommon to get responses such as 'I don't have any' or 'Very little I have is up-to-date'."

Of the resources educators do have, the most popular materials cited include audio visual materials, such as videos and films, and hands-on safety training. Textual materials and guides ranked least useful.

Advisers also seemed hard-pressed to offer many examples when asked what safety initiatives existed in their communities. However, the National FFA Organization, Cooperative Extension System, Teaching Agricultural Safety to Kids (TASK), Farm Safety 4 Just Kids (FS4JK), and Farm Bureau all earned mentions in questionnaire responses.

"These results indicate to me that our project's theoretical goals fit nicely with real education needs," said Sessions. "We can help these teachers and other leaders find the resources they need. In return, we all hope to see fewer agricultural accidents involving youth and stronger community commitment."

OCIA Lists Chapters

CENTRE HALL (Centre Co.)

— Farmers want to make more money, whether from increased sales or decreased inputs. While the market for organic products offers both these advantage, many farmers don't know where to begin to get information on just what's involved in organic growing.

These farmers, and the consumers who buy their products will benefit from the organic farm certification program of Organic Crop Improvement Association (OCIA) International, with 25,000 growers belonging to 65 chapters in 25 countries.

Three regional chapters serve the state of Pennsylvania and nearby neighbors. OCIA is a farmer-established organization and is farmer-run with the distinction of a widely recognized label and standard for excellence that travel well into the world market.

Certification can be a valuable marketing tool for farmers, new and old. What was once a small circle of producers has evolved into a growing industry, with its hand on the pulse of consumer demands and industry trends. The current OCIA International president was once chapter 1 president in Pennsylvania, so this group of farmers has kept pace with a business that is growing at the rate of 25 percent annually.

The process for 1996 spring certification is beginning. Contact one of the following chapters in your area to receive information and get started.

• OCIA PA #1 East/Central, PO Box 452, Centre Hall, PA 16828-0452.

• OCIA PA #2 West, 150 Stuckey Road, Renfrew, PA 16053.

Sollenberger Adds Silo Unloader

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — Sollenberger Silos Corp., in business since 1908, continues to grow and expand its services to better serve the farm community in Pennsylvania and surrounding states.

The company was purchased from Chester Sollenberger by the Nitterhouse family in 1982. Since then, expansion has included the purchase of Star Silos in Myers-town, the addition of J-Star/Jamesway feeding equipment and VanDale feeding equipment, and recently the addition of Silo-Matic silo unloaders and feeding equipment.

The new Silo-Matic dealership is now headquartered at the office in Chambersburg, and was moved there from Fickes Silo Co. in Newville, when that inventory was purchased in March of 1996.

The company also offers the following bottom-unloaders: Flying Dutchman, Little David, and Daidig.

Producers of feed storage structures (tower silos and bunker silos), silos for industry, and installers of material handling equipment. Sollenberger Silos Corp. continues to be a leader in the industry.

New Agribusiness Leader Forms

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Two Switzerland-based leaders in agribusiness and pharmaceuticals, Ciba and Sandoz, announced the decision to merge and form a new company called Novartis.

The new company will serve its customers as the largest worldwide marketer of crop protection chemicals, and will become the second-largest company in seeds and animal health. Total consolidated agribusiness sales of the two companies in 1995 were nearly $6 billion.

Finalization of the merger will be subject to approval by both boards of directors scheduled to meet next month, as well as regulatory approval in some countries.

In crop protection, Novartis will have a leadership position in four key areas: weed control, especially in corn, soybeans and cereals; disease control in cereals, vegetables, vineyards and orchards; insect control in a variety of crops, and; seed treatment. Novartis will have the world's largest research and development investment in the crop protection business. Currently, 15 new compounds are in an advanced stage of development, mainly in the weed control, disease control, and insect control markets.

In seeds, Novartis will produce varieties for growers of corn, oilseeds, sugarbeets, vegetables, and flowers. The company will have one of the largest biotechnology research programs in the industry, focusing on enhancing disease and insect resistance while improving yields.

Novartis will also be a major force in the animal health business, with a variety of disease treatment and prevention products.

Outside the agribusiness sector, the merger creates the second-largest pharmaceuticals company in the world, with combined sales of nearly $13 billion.

Correct Tire Pressures Friendly To Soils

COLUMBUS, Ohio — A major study by Ohio State University agricultural engineers shows that correctly inflated tractor tires can be a farmer's best friend when it comes to minimizing soil compaction.

The study found that large tires with inflation pressures approximately equal to the average pressure under rubber-belted tracks caused slightly less compaction than the tracks, said agricultural engineer Randall Reeder. However, overinflating the tires caused more compaction than the tracks, he said.

The study used a four-wheel drive tractor with 29-inch wide dual tires to compare the effects of a correct inflation level of 7 psi to an overinflated level of 24 psi. In addition, the study compared compaction from similar-sized tractors with 36-inch and 24-inch rubber-belted tracks.

The results showed the correctly-inflated tires caused the least compaction, followed by the 36-inch track, 24-inch track, and the same tires overinflated at 24 psi.

The study used large dual tractor tires, whose correct pressure levels are about equivalent to rubber-belted tracks. Reeder said the compaction difference between correctly inflated tires and the tracks were not that great when compared overall to the overinflated tires. In other words, overinflated tires stood out alone as the worst compaction offenders.

"The question now is that although there is some difference in compaction levels between the tires and tracks used in this study, will that difference be great enough to affect yields?"

This study measured compaction in regards to its effect on these four important physical properties of soils: bulk density, air-filled porosity, air permeability and cone penetration.

In measurements of all four properties, the tire pressure levels and track sizes produced identical ranking of compaction effect, Reeder said. The rankings were the same whether the tractors were pulling a load or driven without an implement.

The consistency of results lends to the validity of the study, which used measuring equipment developed by co-researcher Robert Holmes, now retired from Ohio State's Department of Agricultural Engineering.

Reeder does not think the ranking would change if the study had been done on a different soil type.

The results are also consistent with another segment of the study that showed the effect of different tire and track arrangements on a large combine. The ranking for the degree of compaction, from least to worst, was:

- Wide 68X50.0-32 tires correctly inflated at 15 psi.
- Wide 68X50.0-32 tires overinflated at 24 psi.
- Dual 18.4 R38 tires at 26 psi.
- Experimental half-track.
- Single 30.5 L32 tires at 34 psi.

A 1,200-bushel grain cart weighing 40 tons with dual tires inflated at 35 psi was compared to the combine. The compaction from the much heavier grain cart was the worst by far.

"Two conclusions from this research are clear," Reeder said. "Heavier axle loads cause more compaction; and for a certain axle load, the lower the inflation pressure, or track pressure, the better it is for the soil."

Monsanto Announces Commercialization Plans

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—Monsanto announced how it plans to bring its Roundup Ready technology in soybeans to growers.

Roundup Ready soybeans, which allow over-the-top applications of Roundup herbicides, represent a dramatic technological breakthrough that will change the way growers control weeds in their soybean fields.

The plans include an agreement between Monsanto and growers that ensures they will understand the benefits and the responsibilities associated with the technology before purchasing Roundup Ready soybeans.

"Roundup Ready technology will bring tremendous value to grower," said Doug Dorsey, soybean marketing manager for Monsanto Company.

"Roundup Ready soybeans will help growers increase their competitiveness by creating improve efficiencies. The technology will simplify and improve soybean and weed control, freeing growers from the limitations of their current weed control programs," said Dorsey.

"The application window for Roundup herbicides in Roundup Ready soybeans is the widest available to soybean growers today. Crop safety is unsurpassed and growers will be able to control both large and small weeds," Dorsey said.

"Roundup herbicides will provide soybean growers with the excellent broad-spectrum weed control they've come to expect from Roundup, controlling both broadleaf weeds and grasses," he said.

With these benefits come responsibilities that are outlined in the Monsanto Grower Agreement, which contains two key elements: 1) Roundup Ready seed, like other patented seed, cannot be saved for replanting, and 2) Roundup brands are the only herbicides containing glyphosate that can be used over Roundup Ready soybeans.

Growers may choose to use herbicides other than Roundup brands over Roundup Ready soybeans, but they would forgo much of the value of Roundup Ready technology.

A grower agreement must be signed before a grower purchases Roundup Ready soybeans. "We believe a grower agreement is important for growers because it ensures they understand the benefits and the responsibilities associated with this new technology," said Dorsey.

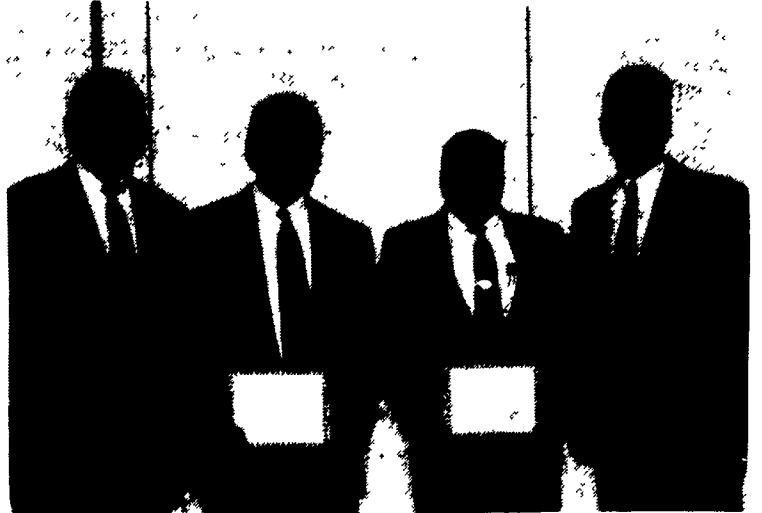

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — "Positioning Your Cooperative for Change" was the title of the 1996 Pennsylvania Cooperative Director Institute attended by Dale Hoffman and Ken Teel, directors of Northeastern Farm Credit, ACA.

The twelfth in a series of cooperative director institutes that began in 1983 held at the Nittany Lion Inn on the campus of Penn State University.

More than 45 directors from 15 different cooperative organizations serving members in 10 states participated. The director school is sponsored jointly by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and Penn State University's Cooperative Business Education and Research Program (CBERP).

More than 20 leaders from educational, cooperative, and government organizations kept the participants challenged throughout the three-day program. Keynote speakers included Dr. Graham Spanier, recently appointed president of Penn State University; Charles Brosius, secretary of agriculture for the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture; and Dr. Christopher Peterson, associate professor of agricultural economics at Michigan State University.

Herman Brubaker, chairman of Those who attended the recent director institute were, from left, Shannon Stokes (associate dean, College of Ag Sciences, Penn State University), Dale Hoffman, Kenneth Teel, and Russell Redding (deputy secretary of agriculture, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture).

the board of Milk Marketing, Inc. (MMI), shared insights gained from his many years of guiding MMI through a number of mergers and strategic challenges. George Steele, former Agway and Farm Credit board member, provided a strong foundation of director basics.

Milk Meter Designed For Management

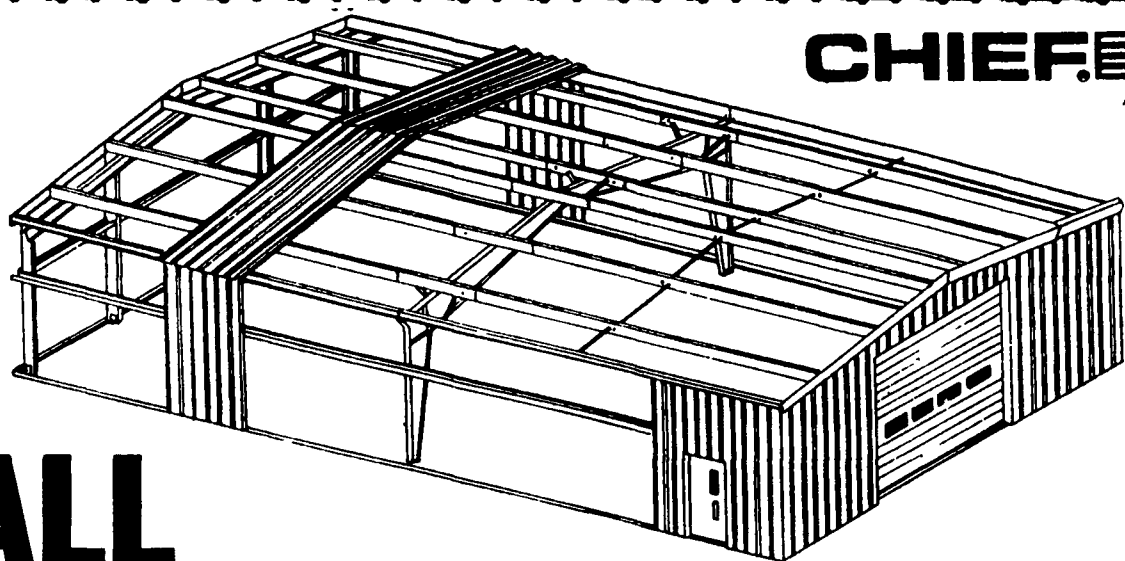

MADISON, Wis. — Managing a dairy operation is easier than ever with the new milk meter from Bou-Matic, according to Ron Curran, product manager.

"The Perfection 3000 milk meter is a management tool and just one component of the ProVantage Integrated Management System," Curran said. "With it, dairy operators can accurately track each cow's production at every milking, and, when it is used in conjunction with Bou-Matic detachers and the ProVantage system, it may actually improve your milkers' performance."

While dairy operators who use the milk meter with the detachers and the complete ProVantage system reap the most benefit, dairy operators who only use the milk meter can still take advantage of the meter's accuracy in measuring milk.

"The Perfection is one of the most accurate milk meters on the market today," he said, "because it's based on fluid dynamic principles."

POURED SOLID CONCRETE

START WITH THE BEST!

POURED CONCRETE WALLS

You get about 40% more concrete for your dollar with a poured, solid concrete basement as compared to a hollow core block basement.

A poured solid concrete basement weighs about 50 lbs. more per cubic foot! Far denser. What's more, poured solid concrete walls are monolithic there are no joints!

This is why laboratory tests show poured, solid concrete basements have many times the flexural and compressive strength to withstand the side and down pressures caused by earth, wind, water and building loads and the material density to resist water penetration.

Best of all, thanks to modern and efficient construction techniques, poured, solid concrete basements are competitively priced.

Solid Concrete For:

- Manure Pit Walls
- Hog House Walls
- Barnyard Walls
- Chicken House Walls
- Retaining Walls
- House Foundation Walls
- Silage Pit Walls

Case Subsidiary Proposes Offer

RACINE, Wis.—Case Corporation announced that its Australian subsidiary, Case Corporation Pty Ltd (Case Australia), will make an offer to acquire all of the issued capital of Austoft Holdings Limited, an Australian corporation, for $1.95 AUD per share (approximately $1.46 USD).

The all-cash offer for Austoft would total approximately $80 million AUD (approximately $60 million USD) and will be subject to certain conditions set forth in the offering documents.

Following the announcement of the offer in Australia on Friday,

Case Australia purchased nearly 15 percent of Austoft's common stock on the open market, the maximum that Case could buy until it receives Australian regulatory approval. Under Australian law, this ownership puts Case Australia in a position to block another company from acquiring Austoft as a wholly owned subsidiary.

Austoft had sales of $69 million AUD for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1995, with operating income of $12 million AUD. It is the world's largest manufacturer of sugarcane harvesting equipment. The company is based in Bundaberg, Queensland, and markets its products in 25 countries in Asia, the Americas and Africa, as well as Australia.

"Austoft is the industry leader and has a consistent record of profitability. This acquisition would not only strengthen our existing business in Australia, but it would increase our presence in some key emerging agricultural markets," said Jean-Pierre Rosso, Case president and chief executive officer. "We believe there is considerable opportunity through our combine resources to expand distribution and increase unit sales worldwide, thereby supporting Case's growth initiative."

As part of Case Australia, Austoft would continue to be based in Bundaberg and would have worldwide responsibility for the sugarcane equipment business, while having access to Case's global distribution network.

Shorthorn Association Holds Meeting

PROSPECT (Butler Co.) — The Pennsylvania Shorthorn Association held its annual dinner meeting at the Garden Gate Restaurant in Prospect. Bradley Eisiminger, Waynesburg, presided.

David McElhaney, Hookstown, and Donald Cowden, Hickory were elected to three-year terms as directors. Officers elected for 1996 are president, Bradley Eisiminger, Waynesburg; vice president, George Six, New Freeport; treasurer, Mary Lou Peoples, Volant; and secretary, George Hunter, Stoneboro.

Richard Peoples, Volant; Gerald Tracy, Elizabethtown; and Alan Beck, Leighton were appointed to serve on the Pennsylvania State Farm Show Committee for 1996.

David McElhaney, Hookstown, updated the membership on the 1996 State Show. This event is scheduled for Saturday, July 20, at the Greene County Fairgrounds at Waynesburg.

John Allen, Saxenburg, advised that the Northwest Junior Beef Classic would be held at the Crawford County Fairgrounds, Meadville on Memorial Day weekend.

Eisiminger introduced Cindy Schneider, Butler, youth adviser. Schneider announced that the juniors would have a pizza party and their annual meeting in March. Present junior membership is 25.

Kathy Allen and David McElhaney presented reports on the national Shorthorn meeting and show held at Denver in January.

Eisiminger announced that the 1996 Eastern Regional PACE Show would be held at the West Virginia State Fair. The 1997 PACE show is scheduled for the Eastern Regional Shorthorn show held at West Friendship, Md.

Advisory Councils Are Action Groups

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — An Advisory Council of the Adams County Farm Bureau is a group of families (usually four to eight) who have voluntarily agreed to meet informally, usually once a month on a regular meeting date determined by the group.

Collectively, these groups are the grassroots of the local Farm Bureau and provide support and guidance to the county, state, and national organizations.

The ACFB Advisory Councils are more than just "advisory" or "discussion" groups. They are action groups which carry out their own solutions to local problems. In addition, they assist in implementing the bureau's policies which they have helped to formulate and develop.

Most importantly the ACFB advisory councils practice and help preserve the American tradition of democracy by becoming involved in local affairs, pinpointing county problems that not only affect the farming community but all citizens and then initiating contact with local, state and national officials to rectify or correct the situation. Most councils have been in existence since the inception of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau.

For instance, the Flora Dale Advisory Council was instituted in 1951. The first meeting was held in October at the home of Cameron and Grace Garretson with four PFB families present: Russell and Olive Barbour, Donald and Margaret Garretson, Cameron and Grace Garretson, and John and Virginia Pitzer. Holly Hatfield from the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau organized the council.

The Flora Dale Council is actively involved in discussing everyday events and agricultural issues among the members: John and Nadine Baugher, Cameron and Grace Garretson, James and Mae Schulteis, Glenn and Marian Slaybaugh, Everett and Olive Weiser, and William and Lois Wilson.

The Adams County Farm Bureau has a membership of over 900 farm families and is affiliated with the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau. ACFB/PFB provides many services free to its membership and several on a fee basis. For further information about ACFB or its advisory councils, contact President Ed Wilkinson, (717) 677-4477.

Public Invited To Horse Meeting

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — The Lehigh Valley Horse Council will hold a regular meeting and lecture on Monday, March 25. The topic for the evening is "Lightning, Your Farm And Lightning Protection," presented by Teates Lightning Protection, Freeburg.

The meeting will be held at Whitehall Mall Community Room, second floor, Whitehall Mall, Allentown.

The public is welcome to this free lecture and meeting.

The Lehigh Valley Horse Council was formed in 1980 as an aid to the horse owners of the Lehigh Valley and surrounding areas. It has offered regular lectures on a bi-monthly basis, which are free and open to the public, and publishes a yearly horseman's directory distributed throughout the area.

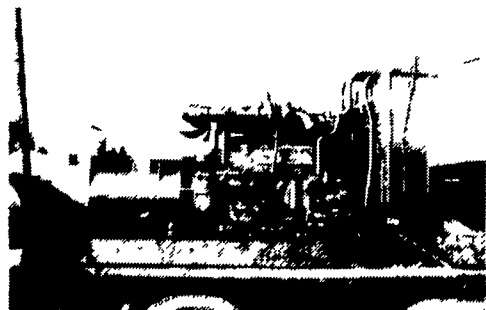

Anyone wishing further information concerning the LVHC or one of its meetings is welcome to contact (610) 837-7294 or (610) 767-7346.

B.U.C.S. OWNER'S REPORT #55

The Word Is Out!

B.U.C.S. Owner's Report

- ✓ Increased Storage Capacity
- ✓ Better Feed Quality
- ✓ Faster Unloading
- ✓ Lower Maintenance

The Jamesway Big Jim® B.U.C.S.™ (BOTTOM UNLOADING CONVERSION SYSTEM) is making big news!

Reports are coming in from B.U.C.S. owners everywhere. And they're reporting that their systems are delivering increased storage capacity, higher quality feed, faster unloading and reduced maintenance versus their old systems. Even in silos that had been retired! But don't take our word for it. Here's what your neighbor has to say about their B.U.C.S. System!

OWNER'S REPORT #55

"We've used our B U C S since 1994 and can't say enough good about it. Converting the bottom unloader has improved every part of our feeding program. We get better quality feed, higher milk production, reduced feeding time and reduced wear and operation time on our mixer."

DAIRY FARM EQUIPMENT

Scroll-Compressor Technology

New in 1994

You may pay less for some dairy farm equipment...
but it can cost you more!

Equipment cost is not the only cost of cooling milk

In the long run, total operating costs of a Mueller' milk-cooling system are generally substantially less than those of "bargain-brand" milk-cooling equipment.

Example	Mueller	Competition
Cost of equipment	$41,000	$28,000
Cost of electricity @ .08 kw for 12,000 lbs milk/day for 10 years	$17,550	$22,850
Total operating cost for ten years	$48,550	$50,850
Savings	$2,300

HIGH TENSILE FENCE...THE FARMER'S BEST INVESTMENT

717-899-7617

BEAVER FENCE SYSTEMS

Darren Peachey, Belleville, PA

"The spring of 1995 was a turning point for our dairy operation as we moved from a high input operation to an intensive grazing system. Intensive Grazing has been everything we hoped it would be. Our cows are healthier and we have less labor per cow. The life of our machinery will be longer. All in all it spells higher profits.

The first thing we did was talk to other people who were grazing to get ideas that we could incorporate into our dairy operation. We hired Beaver Fence Systems to build high tensile fence around the entire farm and we use portable fence to divide the interior into paddocks.

Today's dairy economy does not allow us to keep doing things the way we have always done them. We need to keep looking for more profitable ways of producing milk and managing our land. Intensive grazing has made our business more profitable."

Times Change. Breeds Do Too.

The cattle business is drastically different today than it was ten years ago. Cattle breeds are no different. Simmental breeders have concentrated on producing cattle that are moderate-framed, adequately muscled, sound, reproductively strong, and perform quickly and efficiently in the feedlot.

Take a look at today's Simmental, then you will understand why Simmental is the second most numerous cattle breed in the world.

KELDERMAN AIR RIDE

Adding a Kelderman Air Ride Conversion system to your present suspension will result in a two stage suspension system. This is not to be confused with adding an Air bag mounted above the axle. Allows adding extra spring leafs to increase load rating and still maintain Air-Ride comfort.

The bolt on basic package utilizes an air stem mounted in a convenient location to add or remove air from the system

Optional 12 volt compressor allows changing air pressure setting on the go
Currently available for front and rear suspension in Dodge Series 250 & 350 trucks Available soon for Dodge Dakota models.

Also available for some Ford, Chevy and GMC truck models. Special orders available for most motor homes. This option will smooth out the ride on those rough-road fishing/camping trips.

Mower-Conditioner Cuts 18-Foot Swath

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — New Holland's new Model 1475 Haybine® mower-conditioner is available with 14-, 16- and 18-foot heads. The new pivot-tongue "1475" matches the mowing and conditioning capacity of self-propelled units, New Holland product management explains. The 18-foot head is an industry exclusive.

The three heads have dual counter-stroking sickles for smooth, reliable cutting with less vibration. Floating 20-inch diameter augers have deep flighting to accommodate high volume crops. Gear-driven 102-inch rubber, intermeshing chevron-design conditioning rolls assure fast crop drydown. Roll pressure is controlled by torsion-bar linkage that releases pressure to pass slugs without plugging.

The "1475" has an adjustable swath gate, window shields and fluffing baffle that let operators choose windrow patterns from 38 inches to 96-inch swaths. The company points out that the 25-inch header lift heights lets the "1475" cross large windrows without dragging cut material. High hydraulic pump volume provides ample capacity to drive both header and conditioner.

Thinners Subject Of Biglerville Fruit School

BIGLERVILLE (Adams Co.) — Growers know that flower bud formation is vital to getting good fruit set. Obtaining that fruit set and managing fruit throughout the cycle is critical to obtaining improved fruit production.

Those were some of the messages that more than 110 orchard growers and consultants heard last week at the 1996 Penn State-sponsored Fruit School at the St. Paul Lutheran Church in Biglerville.

Duane W. Greene, department of plant and soil sciences at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst, spoke about the factors that influence flower bud formation. How that fruit will set and develop is a combination of "grower management decisions," Greene indicated.

Examples of activities that discourage flower bud formation include excess nitrogen, severe pruning, selection of a vigorous rootstock, or a gibberellin treatment. Activities that encourage flowering include branch bending, ringing and scoring, selection of dwarfing rootstock, or application of ethephon.

Greene examined other factors and described the interaction of tree age, cell division and bud development, light and energy, leaves, tree vigor, crop loads, and flowering promoters (use of thinners and cytokinins).

Ross E. Byers, professor of horticulture at the Virginia Polytechnic Ag Research and Extension Center, spoke about the use of thinning sprays to obtain good fruit set. The risks of blossom thinning were explored by Charlie Embree, Ag Canada Research Centre, Kentville, Nova Scotia. George Greene, Fruit Research and Extension Center, Biglerville, spoke about parts per million (a concentration, not a quantity), dilute versus concentrate, and tree row volume in plant growth regulator applications.

The use of blossom thinning technology was a critical component of the daylong school.

Since the loss of the use of Alar and 2,4,5-TP for fruit drop control, the use of NAA was increased. "We were left with NAA as our only and weakest stop drop control product to fill the gaps," according to Dick Unrath, North Carolina State University, Asheville, N.C.

One such drop control, AVG

(yet to be given a trade name), shows promise and requires a specific surfactant (silicon) for best effect in apples, according to Unrath. The drop control chemical delays maturity and controls drop. It blocks ethylene production, which causes fruit ripening. But other normal maturity factors are generally altered, such as delayed red color development, higher starch levels, reduced soluble solids content, and a delay in fruit softening.

Fruit treated with AVG (four weeks before harvest) should be evaluated separately for fruit maturity and color grading with the expectation of delaying harvest.

Effective use of NAA, elgetol, endothal, ethephon, Accel, Sevin, and Vydate as thinners were examined. Also, tree and fruit growth regulators were part of the daylong conference. There was also a small group discussion to examine the use of thinners and growth controls.

Pa. 1996 Machinery Custom Rates

By Kim C. Nielsen
Agricultural Statistician

The custom rates shown are averages from voluntary reports by custom operators throughout Pennsylvania. Most of the rates are stated per acre, cwt., ton, bale, or bushel rather than per hour to reduce the variation due to machinery size. Individual rates vary due to differences in working conditions, services performed, or even the operator's eagerness to do custom work. Therefore, the average rates shown should not be considered absolute indications of fair charges.

Acreage rates are shown separately for two regions of the state, labeled "Mountain" and "Valley". The differences in rates between regions reflect differences in terrain, soils and alternative opportunities for the labor and equipment used. Figures labeled "State" represent the straight average of all reports used regardless of geographic location.

Custom rates are slightly higher this year. Of the 68 rates reported, 87 percent have increased, 7 percent have decreased, and 6 percent are the same as last year. The overall average is up 5 percent from the previous year. This percentage increase was computed by adding the rates for all jobs, regardless of basis of charge, and dividing by last year's comparable total.

NFO Announces Strategy To Increase Dairy Income

AMES, Iowa—The National Farmers Organization's dairy department has launched a new dairy program called Milk Profits Plus+++.

"The program's goal is to stair-step milk producers' incomes nationwide to consistently profitable levels," said Al Scott, NFO dairy department director.

"We believe milk producers will more eagerly participate in a named program that provides a step-by-step plan to improve their income, both immediately and long-term."

Scott also explained that it is more efficient for NFO to market a named program like Milk Profits Plus.

"It gives a constancy to our marketing message as we appeal to all U.S. milk producers to work together to improve their incomes through unified marketing efforts," he said.

Milk Profits Plus provides a four-step plan to improve and stabilize milk prices. They are:

- Unite milk producers behind the idea of building a powerful membership base that markets in interlocking fashion nationwide. Provide these producers with accurate "sell-side" milk market information that they do not normally get.

- Always represent the producers' perspectives and best interests by giving the media accurate information about milk markets and by testifying during legislative hearings and debates at the federal and state level and during federal milk marketing order hearings.

- Combine producers' milk production into powerful units that build maximum negotiating leverage in bargaining with buyers. Also, take a leadership role in helping milk producers develop their own system of inventory control.

- Floor milk prices and stabilize those prices by using commodity exchange strategies and tactics, negotiating floor prices in supply agreements with buyers, and negotiating long-term forward contracts with milk processors.

"We know most milk producers need and deserve more income,"

Scott said. "Therefore, we've set three milk price goals for Milk Profits Plus. Our immediate goal was to attain and sustain a $1/cwt increase in raw milk prices—and we have done that."

"Our mid-range goal is to achieve and secure $13.50/cwt mailbox floor prices. Our long-term goal is to allow milk producers to obtain from the marketplace a milk price based upon their own calculated cost of production, plus to profits necessary to provide for their families and their futures."

Other benefits of Milk Profits Plus, in addition to nationwide collective bargaining for higher milk prices, include: trust-protected milk checks to guarantee payment against buyer default; accelerated payment via three-times-a-month milk checks; direct deposit of milk checks; lost-milk income supplement plan; accurate weights and measures, and specialized field staff to assist in achieving and maintaining high quality milk.

"To help launch Milk Profits Plus, NFO dairy staff are helping milk producers calculate their full cost of production," Scott said. "That's the absolute first step in successful bargaining for higher milk prices. We encourage any producer needing help in this process to contact us."

Cornell Offers New Onion IPM Manual

ITHACA, N.Y. — The subject is onions, but the latest release from Cornell Cooperative Extension is no crying matter.

Instead, Integrated Pest Management for Onions provides onion growers, consultants, and industry and extension personnel with the information necessary to make their job easier.

The new manual is a useful reference in the recognition and management of insects, diseases, and weed pests of onions.

"The publication emphasizes onions grown on muck soils in northeastern North America, but will be a valuable guide for onion producers across the country," said author Michael P. Hoffman, assistant professor of entomology at Cornell University, who has research and extension responsibility for integrated pest management in vegetable crops. He co-authored the manual with Curtiss H. Petzoldt, assistant director of the New York State Integrated Pest Management Program, and Anne C. Frodsham, former research support specialist with Cornell University's Department of Entomology.

The 78-page, 8.5" by 11", soft-cover manual made its debut at the New York State Vegetable Conference in Syracuse in early February. Integrated Pest Management for Onions contains a general introduction to the concept and practice of integrated pest management and discusses the growth, development and production of onions.

It contains 86 color photographs of important pests that attack onions, including insects, mites, diseases, and weeds. For each insect pest, information is provided on appearance, life cycle and biology, and management.

Natural enemies of insect pests of onions—predators, parasitoids, and pathogens—are also detailed, as well as how to conserve these natural enemies and use them in an integrated pest management program from early season to harvest.

Sections are also devoted to managing resistance to pesticides, with specific information on how to scout onions and use the currently available disease prediction systems. Appendices detail several forecasting systems, including Blight-Alert, Botcast, Downcast, and the installation and operation of baited cone traps for onion maggot flies.

Approximately 21,000 acres of onions are grown each year in the northeastern United States with estimated cash receipts of $82 million. The principal type of onion grown on New York's 12,000 acres of the crop is the pungent yellow globe. New York ranks number six in the country in the fresh market production of onions.

The publication was supported in part by a Smith-Lever grant from the USDA, and was produced by Communications Services at Cornell University's New York State Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva, NY. An associated 30-minute videotape on Integrated Pest Management for Onions will be released in the spring.

Integrated Pest Management for Onions (order code 139IPM119) retails for $17 (includes tax and shipping) and is available from the Resource Center at Cornell University (phone: (607) 255-2080; FAX: (607) 255-9946; e-mail: dist_center@cce.cornell.edu). There are discounts for quantity orders.

21st Century Announces Death Of Rex

SHAWANO, Wis.—On Jan. 10, at just over 14 years of age, one of the Holstein breed's all-time great Holstein sires, 1H7380 Lutz Brookview Bell Rex, was put to sleep because of deteriorating physical condition.

One of the most prolific semen producers in AI history, Rex is expected to have an impact on Holstein herds around the world for years to come.

Through Dec. 31, 1995, Rex had produced 1,022,722 units of semen, 933,846 of which have been sold (through Nov. 30, 1995). He is believed to be one of only three bulls in history to produce over a million semen units.

Rex continues to be a high-ranking sire in terms of his ability to transmit outstanding production and type. In the latest USDA and Holstein Association sire summaries, he has 27,703 daughters in 6,779 herds, with a predicted transmitting ability of +1265 lbs. of milk and +44 lbs. of protein.

Classified Excellent-94 himself, Rex has transmitted outstanding type to some of his daughters, including extreme dairyness and very correct udders. He is also one of the breed's best for reducing calving difficulty when used on virgin heifers.

Rarely does a bull remain active in AI for the length of time Rex has been at 21st Century Genetics. "Bulls like Rex don't come along very often," said Glen Gilbert, vice president of production for the Cooperative. "He's a rare individual that has helped the profitability of dairy herds world-wide."

In other news, Noba, 21st Century Genetics and Federated Genetics have been designated as the exclusive North American distributors for semen on bulls from two cooperatives in France, URCECOF and Genes Diffusion.

Initially, one Holstein bull, named Ectavia, is to be available. His French proof converts to +60 lbs. of protein, +62 lbs. of fat and +2018 lbs. of milk. There are no official conversions for type with France, but his French type proof is +1.0. He has sired excellent udders and above average stature.

Ectavia resulted from an imported embryo. He is sired by Cleitus and is out of an Excellent-90 daughter of Valiant with over 36,000 pounds of milk and 1159 pounds of protein.

The initial shipments of semen from France are expected in late February. Availability on Ectavia will be limited at first, but supplies should increase during the year. With its large, progressive sampling program, other French bulls will be added to the lineup on a regular basis.

The two French cooperatives have been sampling about 135 bulls per year, but plan to increase that number to 155. Selection programs are similar to ours, with strong emphasis on protein pounds. They also emphasize percent protein and udders.

Cows are contracted throughout France and embryos are imported from the United States.

U.S. bulls have been used heavily as sires of sons and the French have also begun to use Dutch bulls as mating sires. Similar to our experience with the bulls from Holland, many of the bulls in France will be eligible for registry in the official Holstein herdbook.

loader, front end loader or barn cleaner.Gehl-Tuff Flooring prevents the apron from freezing to the floor, allowing manure to slide out with little resistance. Less apron pull means less wear and tear on drives and apron chains. One piece construction won't flex under heavy loads.Extra-strong, T-Bar apron chains with an average tensile strength of over 23,500 pounds keep the biggest loads moving.Double Galvanized steel sides are corrosion resiswon't catch material or leak.Optional hydraulic endgate rests in front of the beater paddles to secure sloppy loads and keep heaped material out of the beater unit you're ready to

The cornerstone of our product offering is the world's largest selling line of self-propelled forage harvesters—the Jaguar.

Next, Rollant round balers make dense bales that stand up and stay weather-tight, resist spoilage, and fit nearly any size operation. It's no wonder CLAAS is North America's leading importer of round balers.

Our world class Quadrant large square balers and Markant conventional size square balers offer the capacity to produce tight bales that keep the air out and minimize nutrient loss.

CLAAS® hay tools will meet your needs and exceed your expectations. Volto rotary tedders reduce field time. Spread cut crops over an area up to 24 ft. wide, accelerate dry down and make hay in a day. High speed Corto rotary rakes gently sweep crops into windrows for easier baling. Liner twin rotor rakes clear a swath up to 24 ft. wide.

More also includes CLAAS's reputation for low maintenance, long-life, and service after the sale. You can expect more from CLAAS because we have more to give. Call now and see just how much more CLAAS has to give.

CUT HAY THE DISC WAY!

- High speed discs - Each disc has two knives to slice through the toughest crops and conditions; the disc gear drive operates in an oil bath for long life.
- Sturdy frame - Cradles the cutterbar for extra protection and durability.
- 540 or 1,000 rpm driveline with equal-angle hitch for smooth power transfer.
- Standard hydraulic tongue - Makes it easy to position the unit without leaving the tractor seat.

NO. 1 SPREADER

MADE FOR HARD WORK AND HEAVY LOADS

The choice of farmers in North America year after year, New Holland box spreaders can be counted on to do the heavy work that can't wait.

The Model 145 hauls up to 177 bushels of material, on one load. The rugged A-frame hitch carries the load safely from below and does not pull it from the front.

Of course, the sides and floor boards will be replaced free for 12 years, if they fail. And only your New Holland dealer can offer this Bonded Protection.

NEW HOLLAND

STEADY PERFORMANCE

ON THE JOB DAY-IN, DAY-OUT

New Holland grinder-mixers work hard every day, providing the feeding efficiency you expect from the industry leader.

The rugged hammermill gives un-matched capacity. Thick plates welded to the 21-3/8" heavy-duty hammermill shaft support the hardened hammers making the mill strong, durable, and smooth-running.

The optional electronic scale more than pays for itself by weighing accurately for more feed efficiency.

Durability...that's why New Holland mills continue to be the market leader.

The Rollant 66 makes fast work of 4'x5' bales. Its unique two-stage pick-up and close tines produce a clean, efficient harvest in less time. Rollatex netting wraps a bale in 10 seconds or less, and double-twine wraps it up in just 20.

The Rollant 46 introduced CLAAS's innovative fixed bale chamber to the marketplace. This versatile baler handles all farm operations from dry hay to silage. Nobody produces a better 4'x4' bale.

The Rollant 42 was designed for family livestock operations. This economical investment produces weather-tight 4'x4' bales for the highest nutrient content possible.

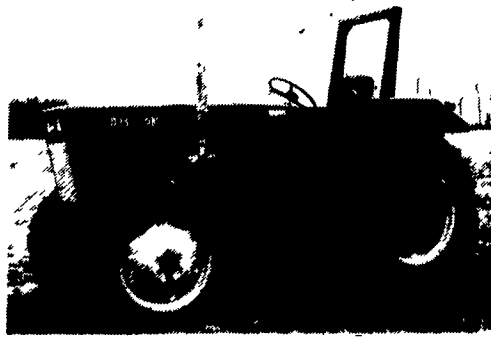

CLAAS bales mean nutrient-filled edible hay, low spoilage, and high crude protein retention.

Each Rollant offers the innovative chamber, low-profile pick-up, and world class dependability. And they all share CLAAS's international reputation for low maintenance, durability and long-life.

Grower Talks About 'The Sun, Rain, And The Increase'

CAROLYN MOYER

Bradford Co. Correspondent
CANTON (Bradford Co.) —

"I only plant the corn. The good Lord gives the sun and the rain and the increase," said a humble Tom Pepper Sr. as he talked about his successful corn crops and his first-place finish in the five-acre corn club's three-year-average corn class last year.

He took the prize with an average production of 200.3 bushels per acre. Although this is the first time he has been at the top of his class, Pepper is no stranger to the winner's circle.

Pepper began entering his production data with the SULBRA Crop Management Association in 1990. He started getting awards in 1991. In 1993 he placed second in the hand-harvest class for ear corn with 197.8 bushels per acre. In 1994 he took second place honors in the three-year average corn class with 185.7 bushels per acre.

"We have increased gradually every year," noted Pepper. "I think the SULBRA Crop Association has certainly been a big help to us."

Farmers Prove There Are Lots Of Variables In Corn Growing

GAIL STROCK

Mifflin Co. Correspondent
McCONNELLSTOWN (Huntingdon Co.) — Elwood Kyper farms more variables than a lot of farmers.

Every farmer watches the sky for weather changes, tests soil in the palm of his hand for moisture, and nibbles at kernels for crop maturity.

But the land Kyper owns in Woodcock Valley near McConnells town, and rents along the Juniata River, contains Class II and III soils.

From shaley Berks on the hills to Philo and Barbar floodplain with corn yields comparable to Hagerstown soils, Kyper produces a good living and satisfying lifestyle from this land. It just takes timeliness, patience, and a wider variety of farming methods.

Kyper farms more than 900 acres with relative Keith Strait and in cooperation with Mike Lang and Russell Kyper. They plant 400 acres of corn. In addition, Russell plants 70 acres of corn from his own 150 tillable, and Mike plants 50 acres of corn from his 100 tillable acres.

Because of such variable soil qualities, they spread the risk of farming over 150 acres of wheat, 100 acres of timothy, 95 acres of alfalfa, 55 acres of green beans, 50 acres of soybeans, 35 acres of sorghum, 23 acres of tomatoes, and 15 acres of oats.

PLANNING FOR THE 1996 CORN CROP

It's hard to believe, but another corn planting season is just around the corner.

The new season should be an challenging one. High corn prices, more corn acres, and some high input costs will test our management skills again this year.

This winter I visited with lots of corn growers at winter meetings around the state. I came away with the message that our business is still as interesting as it always has been.

Here are some of the issues I heard about that we need to consider in 1996.

One issue was that, across the board, we all still need to think more about the basics of corn production. For example, in many areas, just avoiding late planting is a continuing challenge. Planning ahead by managing our equipment and labor resources to finish on time will go a long way to are telling the world about the value of farm crops - and the people who grow them. We're excited about what's happening - and we're proud to support farmers - especially when we can also support you with great varieties - starting with a yield producer like this one.

New N4640 Want extremely high, stable yields of dry grain? This new corn hybrid is like having a solar-fueled dryer. Superior stalk strength and ear retention, plus very good staygreen, make N4640 a good choice for field drying. Heavy test weight grain dries down very fast. Outstanding drought tolerance, too. For top yields of field dry grain, ask us about new N4640 hybrid corn.

N6822 To meet the growing demands of our area, this corn hybrid keeps on going, like a diesel. N6822 can give you very high yields...even under continuous corn. Very good early growth, plant health and standability help N6822 deliver good quality, heavy test weight grain. Tolerates drought very well. Get the most out of your fields. Start with N6822 hybrid corn.

N7448 When growing gets rough, you need corn you can count on. Like N7448. Superior staygreen, standability and drought tolerance — plus a good foliar disease package — help this hybrid cut through tough growing conditions like a sicklebar in grass. It's well-suited for both no-till and continuous corn production. For yields you can rely on, plant N7448 hybrid corn.

Also a big help on the farm is Pepper's grandson, Nate Wooster, who has helped him since he was a little boy.

"He's been following me around ever since he was big enough to walk," said Pepper, with a laugh.

On the farm, Pepper grows 110-125 acres of corn on his 420 rented and owned tillable acres. He also raises hay and about 20 acres of oats.

Each year the Peppers harvest about 800 tons of corn silage and 190 tons of high moisture corn. The balance of the corn is placed in the crib.

"The high moisture corn is ground ear corn," said Pepper.

All the hay on the farm is baled in both square and round bales.

"We put up about 25,000 square bales and the rest of it we round bale," he said.

The feed is put to use to nourish the 67 milking animals and 44 heifers kept on the farm. Currently the herd averages 17,500 pounds of milk which is shipped through Farmland Dairies.

In addition to the Holsteins, the Peppers used to keep several Percherons on the farm, hence the farm name, Holsteins and Horses. Although he sold his last horse recently, he admits he will probably get another some day.

"I was brought up in the horse era," said Pepper, "and it never leaves you. My grandfather used to say, 'There's something about the outside of a horse that's good for the inside of a man.'"

Born and raised in the area on a farm with his three brothers, Pepper purchased this farm in 1958 after renting it for two years. He and his wife, Janet, raised three children: Tom, who farms with his family in Roaring Branch; Deborah, who runs a store in the area with her family; and Michele, who, along with her family, recently stopped dairying.

As for the future of the farm, Pepper says it's up to his grandson, who is considering farming

Variables In Corn Growing

Throw in 300 head of Holstein grade heifers fed on contract, 500 feeder lambs, a Cargill seed dealership, some services such as trucking and snow removal, and you have a farming lifestyle based on co-operation, an approach that was started several generations ago with Elwood's father and Russell's grandfather.

In their operation, Elwood owns most of the equipment, sprays the crops, studies marketing strategies, and makes most management decisions. Mike does just about all of the planting. Keith tills, fertilizes, and limes. Russell puts his agronomy degree and work experience as a Lancaster County crop consultant to use as field scout and crop analyst. Barb keeps the record books and handles the day-to-day "911" farming distress calls.

All of them place high priority on machinery maintenance. All in all, Elwood jokingly says they all get their 40 hours in each week.

"Our farmland won't allow for just the corn and soybean rotation. You can't do the same thing in every field," said Elwood, a Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association board of director. "Timing is all important. We don't have the luxury of Hagerstown soils. We farm from shaley hills to creek bottoms. When spring comes, we start at the top and work our way down."

"We have fields you can walk on all day and never get off the rocks!" Russell said with a laugh. (Humor and patience are on the list of crop additives!) "We can document corn yields from below 50 to 200 bushels per acre."

"In selecting hybrid seeds, the variety has to be able to handle stress. We've had a number of droughts since 1988. We select for high tests weight, too," said Elwood said. They plant 105 to 115-day corn.

Corn yields average 130 bushels per acre. Elwood said that in 1984, corn planted early on the hill "got hammered" while combining their first 200-bushel per acre on the bottomland. Kyper improves soil conditions with conservation practices such as strip farming. Installing sod waterways, subsoiling, and installing tile in the bottomland.

Most of the corn is shelled as dry grain with a John Deere side hill combine, some is chopped for silage, and about 4,000 bushels are picked as dry ear corn. Russell soil tests every three years. They use conventional and no-till planting, and varying degrees in between.

Phosphorus (10-34-0 liquid) is applied with the planter while nitrogen is either applied with the herbicides or side-dressed. They feed 40 percent of production to the livestock and market 60 percent to other farmers and area feed mills.

Elwood tends to shy away from quoting a specific cost of corn production per acre because of all the variables.

"Other businesses seem to be able to come up with an accurate cost of production. We as farmers are in business. But it's hard to put a dollar cost on things. There are so many variables. Land costs, for example, are different in different areas."

Kyper concentrates instead on better marketing and cutting costs. He gets together with several area farmers to reduce costs by buying 12 to 15 load of nitrogen, shopping by phone for the best price. Kyper's operation uses five loads.

He also believes producers as a group could pool their corn to take advantage of the higher price that goes along with higher volume - if they would all agree to sell at the same time.

Kyper checks the market price of corn every day. "I haven't contracted for 1996 yet. Last year we contracted 7,000 bushels. I would like to use futures and options more."

Elwood jokingly said he never got far in life because the farm shop is only a mile up the road. But Elwood's desire to learn has taken him further.

"I like to know what's going on and to have input. I'm interested in corn production and marketing. When you're involved, you share ideas and learn from others."

Elwood is serving his second out of four years as a director for the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association. He is a Walker Township supervisor, wildlife coordinator, and past president for Huntingdon County Farm Bureau, and has served nine years on the ASC committee. He is a member of

CORN SILAGE EXTREMELY VARIABLE

And Animal Science
Penn State

The drought and atypical conditions last fall have resulted in numerous problems related to corn silage quality.

In some corn silage, soluble protein levels are considerably below expected. These should be confirmed by testing another sample since sampling errors and laboratory errors may occur in some cases.

If verified, the low soluble protein values may be related to lack of fermentation because of low moisture or sugar contents in drought-stricken areas, as well as other factors. Silage with a pH of more than 4.8 also may present greater risk of mold, mycotoxin, and other microbial problems, as well as higher dry matter losses.

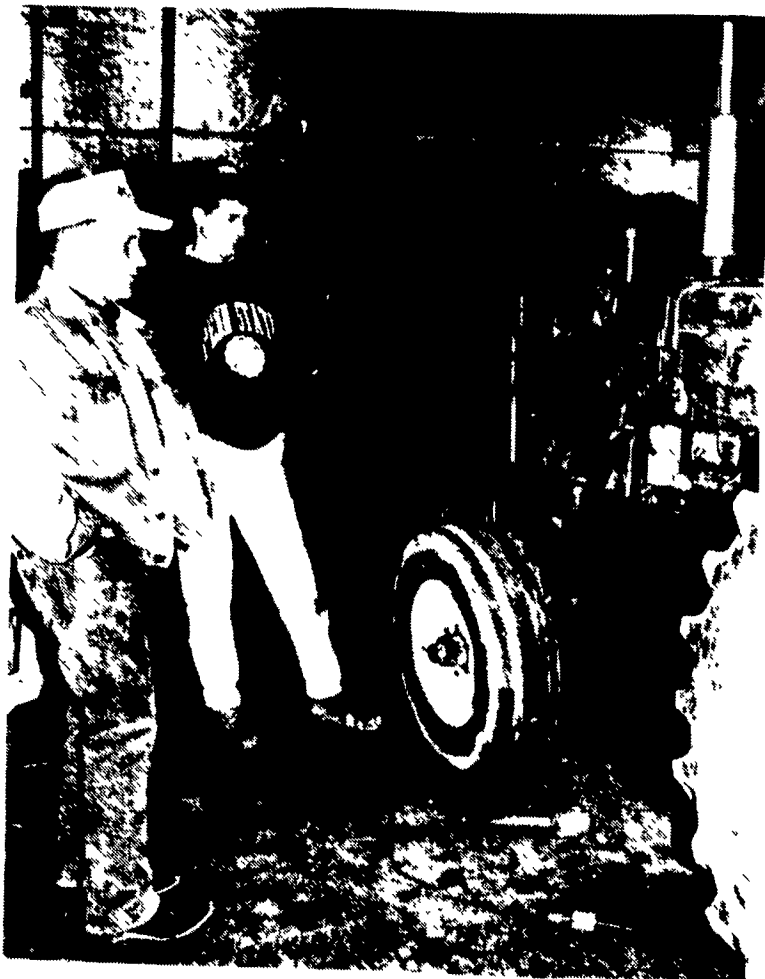

Acid detergent fiber (ADF) and neutral detergent fiber (NDF) are unusually low in some silages due at least in part to lack of plant growth and/or early maturing grain and proportionately higher grain content. Since energy estimates on forage test reports usually are based on fiber content, TDN and net energy values may be unreasonably high.

Practical energy maximums for corn silage fed to cattle are 72 percent TDN and .74 Mcal NEL per pound of dry matter (DM). Conversely, unusually high fiber contents in corn silage may result in reported TDN and NEL values that are appreciably below expected minimums of 60 percent and .63 Mcal NEL per pound, respectively for use in ration formulation.

The TDN and NEL values of corn silages with hard overmatured kernels may need to be reduced by an absolute 4 to 6 percent TDN and .04 to .06 Mcal of NEL per pound DM, unless other factors, such as moisture content have been used by the laboratory to adjust for hard grains. Such would not be necessary if harvesters were equipped with kernel breakers.

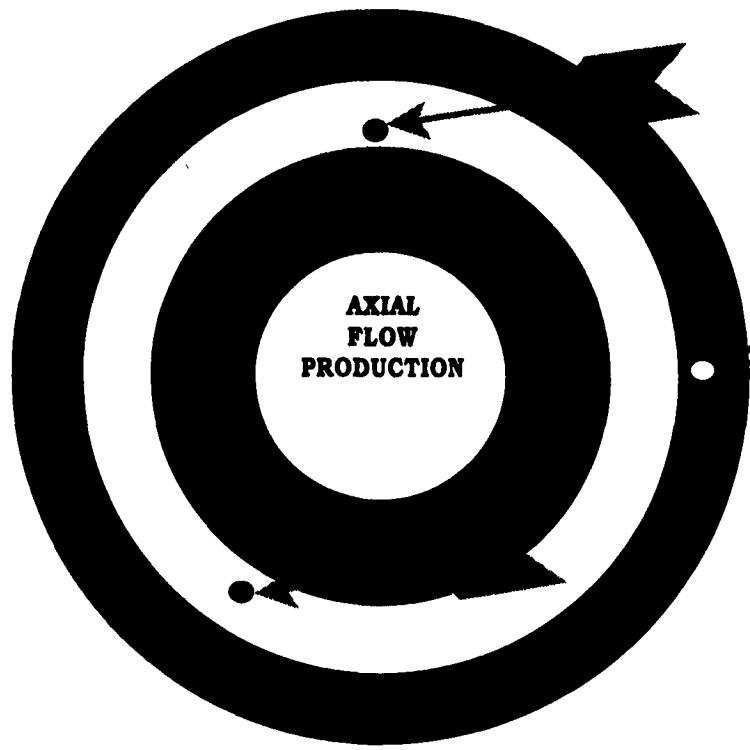

When low fiber values occur, it is important to make certain that adequate forage NDF is present in the diet via heavier feeding of silage or other forages and by including some by-product feeds with higher NDF content in the concentrate portion of the ration, if necessary. High fiber values may stem from pollination failure or extremely growthy corn plants with a low proportion of grain, as well as excessive DM losses during storage from seepage or lack of preservation.

Machinery maintenance ranks high in priority on the Kyper farm. Russell, right, and Elwood prepare an IH 544 for painting.

TAKE TIME TO EXAMINE CORN SILAGE ANALYSES

Virginia Ishler
Dept. of Dairy
And Animal Science
Penn State

When reviewing the analysis reports on corn silages from this year, it was amazing how untypical they were compared to more "normal" years.

Soluble protein appeared to be much lower than expected on several samples and acid detergent fiber (ADF) and neutral detergent fiber (NDF) were either very high or very low with few samples within expected ranges.

In order to get a better handle on what corn silages were really like this year, three different untreated corn silage samples were sent to six different feed testing labs. The results left more questions than what they answered.

Table 1 summarizes the ranges in nutrients from both wet chemistry and NIR analysis.

'The Sun, Rain, And The Increase'

to have to milk more cows and we haven't decided which way we're going to do it," said Pepper. "This year we have to have a dry cow lot in the plans and get the dry cows outdoors and we've got to keep more milking cows."

But one of the first projects this year will be to get the fields in shape after the January flood washed across his riverbottom land.

"We'll know next fall how the flood affected our yields because we have places where we've lost a foot of topsoil. But then there's places where we've gained quite a little bit," he said. "It could have been a lot worse. We'll just do what we have to, that's farming. Sometimes you pay the price of being independent."

When not busy on the farm, Pepper is also an active member of the Leroy Baptist Church and the Leroy Community Association.

Table 1. Summary of corn silage results from six different labs using wet chemistry and NIR analysis. All values reported on a dry matter basis.

	Corn Silage 1	Corn silage 2	Corn silage 3
% dry matter	27.6 - 30.1	37.0 - 43.7	36.6 - 39.0
% crude protein	6.6 - 9.1	7.3 - 9.2	6.7 - 9.1
Soluble protein, % of crude protein	40.0 - 49.7	46.6 - 48.0	31.0 - 51.2
% ADF	24.5 - 33.9	24.0 - 29.9	25.2 - 29.8
% NDF	40.9 - 54.1	48.0 - 49.5	47.3 - 52.5
NEL, Mcal/lb	.62 - .78	.61 - .79	.67 - .77

Note: Nutrients were variable comparing wet chemistry versus wet chemistry, wet chemistry versus NIR, and NIR versus NIR.

In the past, similar projects have been conducted with sample results coming back very similarly between labs. It may be that this year's corn silage is prone to more sampling error and/or it is more difficult for some testing procedures to analyze these unusual samples.

The main point being made is this was a very unusual year for harvesting corn silage. Many herds feeding rations heavy in corn silage are complaining of lower milk production than in previous years.

From the ranges in NEL content from the corn silages in Table 1, very different rations would be formulated. Consider the following in trying to combat some of these problems:

1. Sample corn silage for analysis on a monthly basis.
2. Anytime you question a value on a forage analysis report, call the lab and request a retest. Most labs will do this and for no additional charge.
3. Consider sending a sample to a different lab than you normally use to confirm any suspicious value, especially soluble protein, ADF, and/or NDF.
4. Sample the total mixed ration if one is being fed. This can be very useful in determining if the corn silage is actually as high or low in a nutrient as reported by the lab.

ing if the corn silage is actually as high or low in a nutrient as reported by the lab.

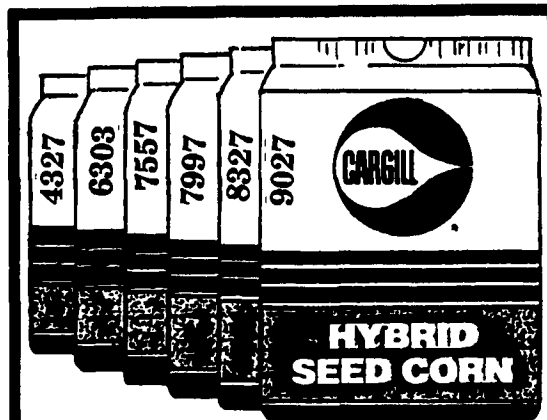

5. Monitor cow production. This is the best way to determine if a ration change is working.

6. Utilize the milk urea nitrogen (MUN) test from DHIA if appropriate. This may offer you a particular area of the ration program or feeding management to focus on for adjustments.

7. Don't overlook the importance of regular body condition scoring and monitoring dry matter intakes.

Remember, forage analysis is only one tool in developing rations. Working with this year's corn silage is going to require the use of many others.

BATTLING BURCUCUMBER

David T. Messersmith

Burcucumber is becoming a serious weed problem for Pennsylvania producers.

Originally found along streambanks and other damp, shady areas, burcucumber is beginning to aggressively invade river bottom and upland fields across the Northeast.

In Pennsylvania, burcucumber is most common in the southeast but is also found in scattered patches throughout the state.

Burcucumber is a summer annual broadleaf weed that is related to the common garden cucumber. It is characterized by its pentagon-shaped leaves, long vines, and spiny seed clusters. The individual seeds are flattened, 1/16 inch long, 1/32 inch wide (similar to a watermelon seed in size), and have a hard seed coat.

The hard seed coat contributes to the prolonged seed dormancy observed with burcucumber. This long dormancy means that fields currently infested with burcucumber will have a viable seed reservoir in the soil and a burcucumber problem for many years.

In Pennsylvania, burcucumber emerges from early May through mid August, although plants emerging after mid July often do not produce viable seed. Vines of mature plants have been observed more than 20 feet in length spanning more than six corn rows. Because of this aggressive growth habit, burcucumber significantly

Burcucumber initiates flowering in August and continues to produce flowers until killed by frosts. Seed clusters form shortly after flowering but remain green and fleshy through mid September.

Ongoing research at Penn State indicates ensiling of green burcucumber seeds dramatically reduces seed viability, but ensiling has no effect on more mature seeds. This suggests early harvesting of corn as silage may prevent viable seed production in burcucumber-infested fields.

Burcucumber emergence occurs in flushes, especially after heavy rains, throughout the summer. Penn State research suggests that incorporation of burcucumber seeds with preplant tillage tends to increase the number of flushes per season, while no-tilled fields may have fewer flushes. Improved control of burcucumber has been observed in no-till possibly due to less mid and late season seedling emergence.

Because burcucumber can germinate throughout the season, it is difficult to control with herbicides that lack residual activity. Traditionally, triazine herbicides have been used to successfully control burcucumber in corn. However, with current label rates of atrazine or simazine (1 to 2 pounds/acre), control of burcucumber is variable. Non-triazine preemergence corn herbicides have not effectively controlled burcucumber.

Several postemergence herbicides look promising for control of burcucumber in corn. Prosulfuron and primisulfuron (Beacon), available as a premix called Exceed, provided the best control of burcucumber in Penn State 1995 field trials. Other products including Marksman, Buctril plus atrazine, and Beacon plus Banvel or atrazine can also provide control of emerged plants.

Consistent residual control will continue to be a problem in some fields. Research from Maryland suggests Classic would be a good option for controlling burcucumber in soybeans, however residual control may still pose a challenge.

Management of burcucumber in corn or soybeans requires effective postemergence control programs that may include split application timings or a follow-up cultivation. No-tillage systems may help reduce populations over the long run, although effective post control must be used in combination. Also, harvesting infested fields as silage can reduce the spread of burcucumber if the seeds are not fully mature.

Remember basic weed management practices such as cleaning equipment before leaving infested fields and monitoring purchased feed for burcucumber seeds. Attack small infestations before they become bigger problems.

With good management, burcucumber infestations can be reduced, and the further spread of this weed stopped, before additional fields and farms fall prey. Above all, watch for new infestations and keep them small and isolated. Prevention is the key to managing this problem weed.

House Action Applauded

WASHINGTON, D.C. — With a bipartisan vote of 270-155, the U.S. House of Representatives approved real reform in agricultural policy.

The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) is pleased that the House completed the farm bill recently and is hopeful that the final version will be on the President's desk by the time the NCGA board of directors meets in Washington.

Both the House and Senate versions of this legislation include the Agricultural Market Transition Program that is based on the key principles of flexibility, simplicity, and certainty. The NCGA identified these principles as essential for the future of American agriculture in an innovative policy developed more than one year ago.

"This new direction in agricultural policy will lead to greater opportunity for farmers," said NCGA President Bill Northey. "Farmers, rather than Washington bureaucrats, will decide what to plant and when to plant. This bill gives farmers the tools they need to maximize profit potential."

The NCGA supported a conservation amendment that will give farmers the opportunity to achieve conservation improvements with incentive-based programs rather than command-and-control regulation. The amendment also reauthorizes the Conservation Reserve Program. "With the addition of the conservation provisions, the House of Representatives took a good bill and made it better," said Rod Gangwish, chairman of the NCGA, who was in Washington, D.C. for the House action.

With NCGA-supported legislation approved in both chambers, the nation's corn growers look forward to the upcoming conference. The NCGA will continue efforts to eliminate the loan rate caps to restore the critical safety net farmers need.

President's Message

Curt Rakestraw
President, PMCGA

I know most of us grain farmers are beginning to look forward to the spring planting season. The warm spring sun is sure going to feel good after the winter we've had.

This year may be a year to look forward to. In fact, it just might be one of the best years for grain farmers in a long time.

Subsoil moisture looks good and so do grain prices.

I know after the last few short corn crops we have had, the price would collapse the following year. This year, several reasons are making the price look very promising.

First of all, with wheat prices as high as they are, there should not be much substituting wheat for corn. Wheat prices have a good chance of being high for this year's crop because the Kansas wheat crop is looking poor.

Second, the corn and soybean crop in the southern hemisphere is continually being down-graded. This should lead to a continued good export of U.S. crops.

Next, Dr. Louis Thompson, along with a number of other meteorologists, are predicting that weather patterns over the Midwest will not be typical for a big Midwestern corn crop.

Finally, usage is projected to be around nine billion bushels for 1996-1997. With 82 million acres planted and 74 million acres harvested at an average yield of 125 bushels per acre, a total crop would be 937 billion bushels. A crop this size would only add 300 million bushels to the carryover and be the second smallest carryover in history!

I know there are a lot of maybes and assumptions written here. However, with a little luck and the help of God, this season will develop to its fullest potential and be one of the best ever.

Sincerely,
Curt Rakestraw

Corn Growers Take Seat At Table

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman named an Ohio farm leader active in the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) to a newly-formed advisory committee on concentration in agriculture.

Brent Porteus, a corn farmer and immediate past president of the Ohio Corn Growers Association (OCGA), accepted the appointment to serve on the 21-member committee. Glickman formed the group to examine the impact of shrinking competition in meat packing and other segments of agriculture.

"I want to represent the best interests of corn growers," Porteus said, "I'm going into this assignment with an open mind and without any agenda."

U.S. farmers produce more corn than any other crop. Most of it is used to feed livestock for meat production.

The committee plans on examining competition in many segments of agriculture. Porteus mentioned two that will attract his attention.

"The impact of consolidation and mergers in the meat packing industry can be very significant to the viability of livestock producers who also rely on us," Porteus said.

"But I want the committee to look further than just that. I want us to examine the increased consolidation of the transportation sector, especially the rail system and the impact it's having on corn and other grain producers."

Corn growers across the country express concern about railroad car shortages and other problems which slow the movement of grain and depress prices.

Porteus farms 1,000 acres of corn, soybeans, and alfalfa in eastern Ohio with his father and brother. They also run a cow-calf operation. He led the Ohio corn growers in 1995 and now serves on the board of directors and government relations committee of the NCGA.

The Coshocton County, Ohio farmer holds a bachelor's in agricultural economics from Ohio State University.

Now's The Time To Join Corn Growers

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — PMCGA is pleased to announce continuing support for our Membership Incentive Program (MIP) that we are conducting in conjunction with a number of cooperating Pennsylvania seed companies.

The MIP with seed corn company sponsorship will entitle any corn grower who plants at least five acres of corn to a free bag of seed corn (standard size) with a three-year membership in PMCGA/NCGA.

This program applies to all three-year memberships, new or renewal.

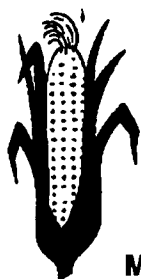

To participate, simply complete the membership form and indicate the brand of seed corn you would like to try. Remember the theme of our program is "Try Something New," so we hope you will use this opportunity to experiment a bit and not just get a bag of free seed corn.

You will receive a certificate for a free bag of seed from the company chosen from PMCGA. You will make the ultimate decision about which hybrid to receive in consultation with the local seed corn dealer for the company you selected. PMCGA will send the names and addresses by brand chosen to the appropriate seed corn company's statewide contact person and they will con-

In addition to this incentive program, you'll be joining thousands of other growers across the country who are showing their support for the corn industry. Locally, you'll be supporting PMCGA's activities such as Corn Talk, our Corn Conference, and local corn promotion activities.

RESEARCH UPDATE

FEED VALUE OF LIGHT TEST WEIGHT CORN

Greg Roth
Dept. of Agronomy
Penn State

encountered the same challenges in marketing low test weight corn. A recent feeding study there has concluded that feeding value of low test weight (at least 46 pounds/bushel) corn is equal to normal test weight corn.

The feeding study was conducted by Ivan Rush, Brad Weichenthal, and Brad Van Pelt at the University of Nebraska to evaluate light test weight corn for growing and finishing beef cattle compared to normal U.S. No. 2 corn. The study was recently summarized in Feedstuffs, a weekly newspaper for agribusiness.

In the study, six pens of either 11 or 12 crossbred steers were fed similar rations containing either high or low test weight corn. The high test weight corn was 56.5 pounds/bushel in one year and 55.9 pounds/bushel in the second year. Low test weight corn was 47.7 pounds/bushel and 45.9 pounds/bushel in years one and two, respectively.

The steers were fed a growing diet which consisted of corn silage, haylage, supplement, and 37 percent dry rolled corn and then a finishing diet of corn silage, supplement, and 86 percent dry rolled corn.

There were no significant differences in daily gain, dry matter feed intake, or feed required per unit of gain in the steers fed during the growing stage. Steers fed the normal corn gained 2.46 pounds/day compared to 2.51 pounds/day for those fed the light test weight corn during the growing phase.

During the finishing phase, the average results over both years of the study also indicated no differences between the corn treatments in terms of daily gains (3.17 pounds/day), dry matter intake, or feed required per unit of gain. In one year, daily gains were significantly improved with the light test weight corn. Carcass characteristics were also generally similar among the corn treatments, except that hot carcass weights averaged 19 pounds heavier with the low test weight corn.

CORN TALK NEWS

The results of this study support those from some previous research that has shown that the feed value of low test weight corn is often similar to normal test weight corn and that test weight alone is not a good indicator of feed value. Low test weight does present some other problems for the feed industry such as higher storage and transportation costs and can create a lower density product that may not be suitable for certain packaging or volume-

The best solution for managing low test weight corn is to try to avoid it by selecting hybrids that are adapted and that produce good test weight grain, and by planting early. Even then, in some cases, a short season or crop disease problem may result in low test weight grain. If possible, keep low test weight corn separate and market it through channels where dockage will be less. When possible, consider feeding it on the farm since, based on this study, it will have similar feed value to corn with normal test weights.

Growers Applaud Bipartisan Senate Action

WASHINGTON, D.C. — By a 2-1 margin, the U.S. Senate voted in favor of landmark reform of federal farm policy.

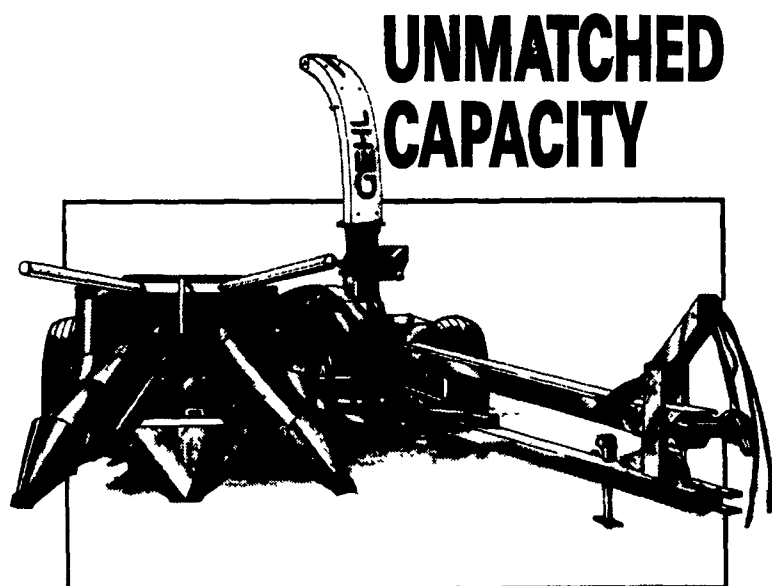

The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) reacted positively to the legislation moved forward by the Senate, which includes substantial elements of the Agricultural Market Transition Act (AMTA) advanced by the House Agriculture Committee.

"This reform provides farmers with flexibility, simplicity, certainty, and income support that our organization identified long ago as essential for the future of American agriculture," said NCGA President Bill Northey following the Senate vote. "Farmers will be able to respond to markets without considering the loss of federal income support."

Northey praised the Senate bill for moving decision-making to the farm, rather than having planting judgments dictated by the federal government. He believes the Senate bill gives farmers the tools needed to maximize profit potential.

Both Democrats and Republicans traditionally formed coalitions to approve

Growers Urge Fast Action On Farm Bill

PHOENIX, Ariz. — The leader of the organization representing the nation's corn growers urged the U.S. House of Representatives to pass new multiyear farm legislation.

Bill Northey, president of the 28,500-member National Corn Growers Association, (NCGA), told reporters attending the Commodity Classic convention the farm bill process "has dragged on long enough."

"Policies of the past do nothing for today's farmers except drive us from the farm program and jeopardize the progress we've made to conserve soil and protect water," Northey said.

The NCGA leader said most farmers favor the contract payment mechanism contained in the farm bill approved by the U.S. Senate recently. But Northey said the House can make the bill even better," Northey told reporters. "The contract payment . . . allows flexibility, certainty and simplicity. But we urge House members to eliminate the cap on loan rates to allow those rates to reflect recent market prices."

The Iowa corn grower echoed the same position in a letter to President Clinton recently. He asked the President and Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman to work with Congress in order to adopt a policy which allows corn loan rates to fluctuate. He said such a policy provides a more effective farm income safety net in years when corn prices drop.

Northey also discouraged the President from limiting planting flexibility. While campaigning in Iowa two weeks ago, President Clinton expressed a need to require farmers to plant a crop as a condition for farm program eligibility. Northey said such a requirement leads to ". . . additional, burdensome paperwork while accomplishing no legitimate agricultural policy."

"If a planting requirement is included . . . Congress will undoubtedly begin asking for exemptions with the first crop loss," Northey said, noting many lawmakers approved a so-called "0/92" program in the past. That program allowed farmers to receive price support payments on up to 92 percent of their program crop acreage if they could not plant or harvest a crop due to harsh weather.

"If this farm bill requires farmers to produce a crop when economics dictate otherwise, it will sanction a cheap grain policy," the farm leader said.

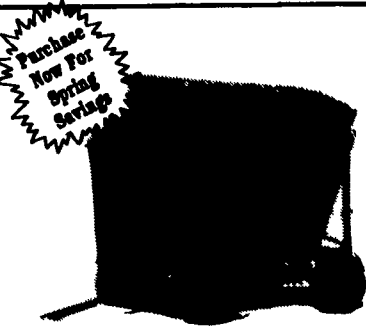

The chairman of the NCGA board of directors, Nebraska farmer Rod Gangwish, and the organization's Chief Executive Officer (CEO) Chris Wehrman, plan to travel to Washington from the convention in order to urge quick action in the House on a new farm bill. The NCGA held its policy-making annual meeting in Phoenix along with the American Soybean Association (ASA).

More than 3,600 farmers and industry leaders registered to attend the first-ever joint-convention of the two major U.S. commodity organizations.

Lebanon Extra Plant Food

For over 47 years, farmers have been choosing Lebanon Extra for premium homogeneous/ammoniated plant food. Lebanon Extra is ideal for use in row applications where nutrient safety and consistency is crucial to yields. And its homogeneous/ammoniated granules offer superior performance over so-called "Custom-formulated" blends.

A blend of raw materials can result in uneven feeding. Unlike homogeneous/ammoniated granules which deliver all the primary nutrients and micronutrients in each particle — ensuring even distribution for consistent performance.

ON-FARM EVALUATION
TESTS FOR CORN

Greg Roth
Department
Of Agronomy

Several new methods of predicting N requirements for corn are being evaluated in a three year research project that is underway at Penn State. This project is designed to evaluate alternatives to the Pre-sidedress N test that was introduced several years ago. One of the test procedures is based on a soil test taken at or near planting and the other procedure involves the use of the Minolta SPAD chlorophyll meter, which is used to assess the chlorophyll content of young corn leaves. A third method of evaluating N requirements also involves using the chlorophyll meter at the early dent stage. This procedure would not provide any information for use in the current season, but could provide feedback for next season. These tests looked promising when evaluated initially by one of my colleagues here at Penn State, Dr. Dick Fox, but we were interested in having them evaluated under field conditions and by consultants, extension agents, and fertilizer dealers.

As part of the research project, funded by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, 10 cooperators from around the state have been evaluating these tests by sampling selected fields for corn producers in their area and reporting their results, along with field history information, so that we can incorporate this information into our database. Many of these cooperators also have been conducting some N trials to assess the accuracy of the test procedures. The project is in its third year now and over 400 corn fields have been tested with these procedures.

The initial results are indicating that the chlorophyll meter can provide some very accurate results, comparable to the PSNT. Using the chlorophyll meter would eliminate the need for soil sampling and could provide growers with immediate feedback in the field.

To use this method to accurately predict sidedressing requirements, however, there needs to be a fertilized check area established in the field prior to sampling to correct for chlorophyll differences due to hybrid, rotation, tillage and other effects. This is the main drawback to using this procedure.

The chlorophyll meter can also produce accurate results when used at the early dent stage, and at this stage we do not need the fertilized check area as we do earlier in the season. Many of the project cooperators have found this to be a useful tool that they could use to assess the N fertility programs of many fields and give feedback to growers immediately. Also, the timing of the test is attractive because the sampling is done during August and schedules are not nearly as busy as in early June when the other tests are done. Cooperators report that many growers have similar fertility programs from year to year, so feedback in August is valuable in planning for the next year's fertility program.

The at-planting test would be an attractive alternative for those growers who wanted to apply N at or just after planting. In this project, our results have been inconsistent with this test because in some cases the at-plant test has overestimated the actual N requirements determined from our on-farm tests. In the third year of this project, we will focus on identifying the factors that cause problems with this test so that we can avoid those situations if we decide to use it in the future.

Following our evaluation in 1996, we will develop recommendations for use of these testing procedures under Pennsylvania conditions. These tests should provide help in better tailoring N applications and reducing input costs where manure and previous legume crops are utilized in the cropping systems and where the PSNT has not been a viable alternative.

Yield Contest Winners Announced For Nation's Top Crop

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Despite a tumultuous growing season resulting in a smaller U.S. corn harvest, winners of the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) 1995 National Corn Yield Contest brought in some significant-sized crops.

Corn yield entries tabulated from the 27 farmers who took first, second, and third place in nine separate classes of the popular NCGA contest ranged from 185 to 314 bushels per acre.

"The men and women who participated in this contest produced some impressive crops despite a great deal of adversity caused by a wet spring, stifling-hot late summer and an early frost," said NCGA President Bill Northey. "We face uncertainty due to weather day in and day out. Currently we face additional uncertainty because a new farm program remains unresolved in Washington. We urge Congress and President Clinton to establish one with complete flexibility, an adequate safety net, and to put it in place soon," the Iowa farmer said.

The goal of the NCGA National Corn Yield Contest is to encourage corn growers to develop new, efficient production techniques that improve corn profitability. The highest average yields came from growers who used no-till practices.

The NCGA announced the following national winners:

The NCGA plans to honor

each national winner along with 489 state winners at this year's Commodity Classic, February 25-27 in Phoenix, AZ. "U.S. corn growers deserve recognition because we continue to lead the nation and the world in crop production," the NCGA leader said.

The "1996 Corn Yield Guide," sponsored by John Deere & Company, Monsanto Company and Northrup King

Company, summarizes all 1995 winners, their yields and production practices. Farm Journal magazine plans to publish the guide in its March edition. Additional copies of the 1996 Corn Yield Guide can be obtained by calling the NCGA at (314) 275-9915. The organization represents more than 29,500 corn growers in 47 different states.

Hybrid Selection Pays Dividends for New York Dairy

Planting corn hybrids that are scientifically screened for their feeding qualities is proving to be extremely valuable for a 1,000-cow New York dairy. In fact, Odyssey Farm, Copake Falls, is saving enough to cover the cost of all crop inputs for a year.

"We figure the hybrids we plant for corn silage increase milk production by 4 lbs. or more per day," says partner Weir Stewart (left in photo). "In our operation, that's enough to cover the entire cost of fertilizer, seed and planting for one year."

"We discovered what differences in corn-silage feeding quality could mean to our bottom line in 1991," continues Stewart. "That's when we learned that Cargill Hybrid Seeds has done considerable research to screen hybrids for feeding quality."

"There was a definite drop in production when we ran out of the silage from the Cargill hybrids and began feeding other silage. We also discovered that we could plant Cargill hybrids that were highly digestible and also yielded excellent tonnage per acre."

"We've learned that a quality forage program is extremely important to maximize milk production," says Stewart. "It's very difficult to overcome poor forage quality, even when you add the expense of good supplementation."

Selected for Profit Potential
Hybrids are selected on the basis of their potential to increase the profitability of livestock operations by enhancing forage yield, reducing feed supplement costs and improving animal performance. Hybrid offerings cover 80- to 120-day maturities.

Odyssey Farm managers found the research especially important to their operation since they prefer feeding rations with higher amounts of corn silage than haylage. Corn silage is easier to manage from both a crop-production and feeding standpoint, they say.

"It's difficult to harvest alfalfa with consistently high feed value in an operation this large," says partner Bob Kimmel (right in photo). "Alfalfa must be cut and harvested several times a year and it can be difficult to harvest at the best time for maximum quality. Corn silage needs to be harvested only once so total labor and equipment costs are less. The time available to harvest quality corn silage is much wider than the time available to harvest haylage."

"Good-quality forage is the basic building block of any ration," Kimmel adds. "I've been involved in the dairy business for more than 25 years, and I've learned that cows are more healthy and give more milk when they eat more. Those that are eating the most dry matter are usually the healthiest. A highly digestible ration can affect milk production, improve health and improve breed-back and conception rates."

Milk Production Increases While

If milk production increases while herd size expands, that indicates that the cows are probably being fed right. Young cows reach peak production faster and they maintain that peak longer.

Lee Hoover, Jr., Boiling Springs, Pa., increased his herd's production and held solids and milkfat yields while expanding the herd from 40 to 65 milking cows.

"High quality corn silage plays a key role in our feeding program," says Hoover. "It reduces feed costs and improves the cows' appetite."

Hoover, now in his third year growing corn for silage recommended by the Cargill Corn Silage Menu, likes the fact that these hybrids are screened and selected through an extensive evaluation program.

"I tried a couple of bags the first year," he recalls. "It worked so well that I planted more the next year. The cows really like the silage. Intake

Hybrids Pack More Feed Value

Fred England knows the value of high-quality roughage as well as the importance of dry matter intake for efficient milk production.

"High-quality corn silage can make a big difference in milk production because it's a major economical source of energy," says England, Williamsburg, Pa. "Good silage keeps the cows eating. Their intake level remains more consistent to better satisfy their total nutrient needs."

The 1993 and 1994 crop seasons convinced England to pay more attention to the hybrids he planted for silage. For several years he'd been interested in producing silage higher in feed value and digestibility. Like so many other producers, he figured that corn varieties that look good while they're growing and produce high grain yield could also yield high-quality silage.

England has found it very difficult to identify hybrids that produce consistent high yields of grain with the right balance of stalk dry-down, ear moisture and total digestibility.

"The Cargill Corn Silage Menu made sense when I first heard about it," he says. "I figured it was worth a try even though I was somewhat doubtful it would work."

However, England discovered that the Cargill hybrids recommended for silage proved to be much better than the others he's tried.

"As soon as we started feeding silage from the Cargill corn I knew we were on the right track," says England. "Cargill has taken the guesswork out of maximizing our corn silage feeding program."

rose and production per cow increased immediately; all this while I was expanding the milking herd size."

Hoover lists several benefits of the specially selected hybrid for corn silage that he plants:

- Hefty ears similar to a good grain corn.
- Stays green and dries down evenly with solid ears.

- Packs well in the Trench (bunker) silo.

- Complements the feed program.

"We use labor-intensive, older facilities because we rent the farm and buildings," he explains. "Our feed program includes baled hay, baglage (long-stemmed haylage in bagged big round bales) and grain mixture."

"We feed from a trench silo," he says. "Corn silage fits our situation very well. This Cargill concept is the best thing that every happened to corn silage."

"As soon as we started feeding it" Cows Ate Better and Milk Production Increased

"As soon as we started feeding the silage grown from the corn hybrids recommended for our farm, we noticed the cows started eating better and our milk production per cow went up by 4-5 lbs. of milk a day," says Jake Tanis, a Center Hall, Pa., dairy producer (shown in photo with son Adam).

Tanis is referring to hybrids specifically selected for top corn silage traits. He chose them from the innovative corn silage Menu from Cargill Hybrid Seeds.

When Tanis first heard about the Cargill Menu, he said it sounded promising, but he wasn't sure it could be as good as advertised.

"We planted 24 acres in what turned out to be a bad year, but we got great silage," says Tanis. "The Cargill corn was superior to anything else I planted for silage. I couldn't believe the vigorous growth, the size and strength of the stalks and the large, consistent ears of the hybrids suggested for my farm."

Production Improvement

Silage from other hybrids came out of Tanis' silo first. As soon as he hit the Cargill corn he noticed a difference in production of 4-5 lbs. per cow per day.

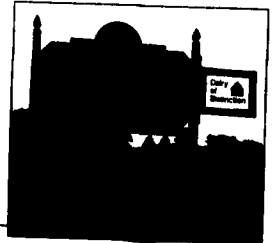

Tanis, who farms with his wife, Sally, and son, has a milking herd of 100 Holsteins, all registered and on DHI test. In the purebred evaluations they have 20 cows rated excellent, 46 very good, 28 good plus. The herd has a Breed Age Average ranking of 109.

27,800 lbs. Per Cow

With a sowing herd average of 27,800 lbs. per cow per year, 1,050 lbs. fat and 900 lbs. protein, Tanis believes that every increase in production is a bonus.

Besides silage, the cows are fed a total mixed ration (TMR) twice daily. It includes haylage, roasted soybeans, distillers grains, energy booster (a fat product) and protein meal.

The TMR is essential to assure they receive a balanced ration, Tanis emphasizes. But highly digestible corn silage and haylage are vital components in the herd's total diet and they're essential to good production.

"Dry matter intake means everything in making milk profitably," he points out. "We're very fussy about our feed. That's why we like the hybrids recommended in the Cargill corn silage Menu for our area. This Cargill program is a lot better than I thought it would be. It really made me a believer."

Field of Dreams

This year Tanis has a field of Cargill hybrids along the road by the entrance to his "Ideal Holsteins" farm driveway. "It looks so good that everybody I bought seed from claims it," he reports. "But if you look on the Cargill corn silage Menu, that's one of the hybrids recommended for my farm. It's as good as promised."

and owns 930 acres, grows about 100 acres of corn for silage. Other crops include: 350 acres corn for grain, 400 acres alfalfa for hay, 200 acres soybeans and 40 acres barley.

"We've been interested in improving our feeding program for some time," says England. "I believe the corn silage portion of our ration is now top-notch, thanks to Cargill's excellent forage quality program."

MANAGING COVER CROPS FOR CONSERVATION TILLAGE

William S. Curran
Department of Agronomy
Penn State

Cover crops are crops seeded to provide a soil cover or barrier from soil erosion. In addition, cover crops can improve the soil by adding organic matter, nutrients, and stability, and act as scavengers to trap leftover nutrients that otherwise may leach out.

Cover crop uses include ground covers, mulches, green manures, nurse crops, smother crops, and forage and food uses for animals or humans. Cover crops can be annual or perennial species including certain legumes, grasses, and non-leguminous dicots.

An understanding of the cropping system is necessary for selecting the proper cover crop. Characteristics important for cover crop selection include life cycle, seeding date and rate, winter hardiness, nitrogen fixation or scavenging ability, feed or forage value, and establishment costs.

There is no single cover crop or system that will provide all benefits. Therefore, experimentation may be necessary before identifying suitable cover crop(s) for an individual system.

Management of the cover crop is critical for deriving the benefits and minimizing potential problems that may arise. Planning the management strategy well in advance will assure the greatest success.

Management of Cover Crops Preplant Considerations

Prior to cover crop establishment, several factors must be considered. Soil fertility is an important consideration in any cropping system. A reliable soil test which determines the nutrient limitations of a soil including pH is a good place to begin the planning process.

If certain nutrients are limiting, follow soil test recommendations for the primary crop, keeping in mind that high fertility will also maximize cover crop growth.

Another important consideration is the pest history of the field. In general, additional pest management inputs are not necessary when utilizing cover crops. However, as with any crop, pests can become a problem in the cover crop system. If possible, select fields that have minimal pest problems when establishing the cover crop.

Since there are generally crop/pest associations such as alfalfa or clover and leafhopper or winter small grains and winter annual weeds, these pests can also become a problem in the newly planted cover crop within a cropping system.

Consider the herbicide applied the previous season. Certain herbicide residues can carryover and injure sensitive rotational crops. If these residues have not dissipated before a sensitive crop is planted, injury or death of the cover crop may occur.

Herbicides including atrazine and simazine can injure both grass and legume crops and several of the herbicides belonging to the sulfonylurea and imidazolinone families persist and can injure legumes. Always refer to current crop protectant product labels to be certain of crop rotation restrictions or other limitations before establishing any crop.

Establishment Options

Good seed-to-soil contact is necessary for proper germination and emergence. (When broadcast seeding, increase the seeding rate for proper stand establishment.)

In general, using preplant tillage to prepare the seedbed, controlling weeds, and disrupting insect and disease life cycles improves cover crop establishment.

Conventional seedbeds are prepared by plowing, disking, and harrowing the soil prior to seeding. Seeding depth depends upon the species being sown. Generally, for most cover crops, small-seeded legumes require shallow seed placement ($\frac{1}{4}$ inch), while larger seeded legumes and small grains are generally planted 1 to $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches deep.

No-till seedings can also be successful, but planting equipment as well as potential pest problems must be considered. Excessive plant residues can hinder uniform planting and interfere with seedling development. However, a no-till drill that places the seed at the proper depth and allows good seed-to-soil contact is an excellent seeding option.

No-till seedings are best suited for areas where soil erosion is a concern. Be sure to control live vegetation at planting time with an appropriate burndown herbicide application (e.g., Roundup).

Broadcast seeding may also be acceptable, although this is often the least successful method. Small-seeded species such as the clovers tend to establish better by broadcast compared to larger seed species. Several broadcast techniques and timings may be utilized.

Surface seeding with a drop-type or cyclone-type seeder provides a uniform distribution of seed. For larger areas, aerial seeding by fixed-wing aircraft or helicopter in late summer during crop die down can be effective. As the leaves of soybean plants drop off, they act as a mulch by covering the seed and allowing for retention of moisture and soil protection.

Another broadcast seeding method is frost-seeding, which occurs during late fall or early spring when the ground is honeycombed. This allows the seed to fall into the cracks and germinate when the temperature rises in the spring. Cover crop seeding at layby or last cultivation has generally not been successful.

Suppression or Control of Cover Crops

Cover crops that interfere with growth of the primary crop defeats their benefits. Effective control or suppression of the cover crop is generally necessary before emergence of the main crop.

Commonly used methods include tillage, mowing, herbicides, or selection of species that winterkill or have a short life cycle.

Tillage not only controls but incorporates cover crops into the soil allowing them to degrade quickly and release nutrients for the primary crop. An example of this would be a cover crop used as a green manure.

Moldboard plowing is often necessary if large amounts of cover crop biomass are present. Chisel plowing followed by disking may be inadequate for certain cover crops such as cereal rye if large amounts of residue are present.

Mowing can successfully control certain covers prior to planting the primary crop if timed properly. Mow hairy vetch when the first purple flowers are visible. Mowing vetch prior to flowering can fail to provide adequate control and result in both crop competition and the production of vetch seed which could affect future small grain production. Mowing vetch after pod formation may result in viable seed production which may impact the primary crop.

Mow cereal grains after heading to insure successful control. Mowing prior to head emergence will likely result in regrowth from tillers. Regrowth from cereal grains harvested for forage in the boot stage of development is a common problem for producers that do not use an appropriate herbicide program.

Certain crops such as oats can be either mechanically incorporated or mowed after heading or can be used as forage.

Pasturing with animals or cutting for hay or silage are viable ways of utilizing cover crops for other means besides soil improvements. Species which have short life cycles or are not winter hardy may also be a means by which cover crops are controlled. Generally, crops which are planted in the fall, produce vegetation, and are killed by cold temperatures in late fall/early winter provide adequate ground cover and are effective in conserving and improving soil as well as holding moisture. Be aware that winter kill occasionally may not occur.

Control or suppression of cover crops can be done effectively with herbicides. In addition to product selection, application timing is important. In general, make herbicide application at least one week ahead of planting. This insures complete kill as well as some dry-down of the cover crop prior to planting the primary crop.

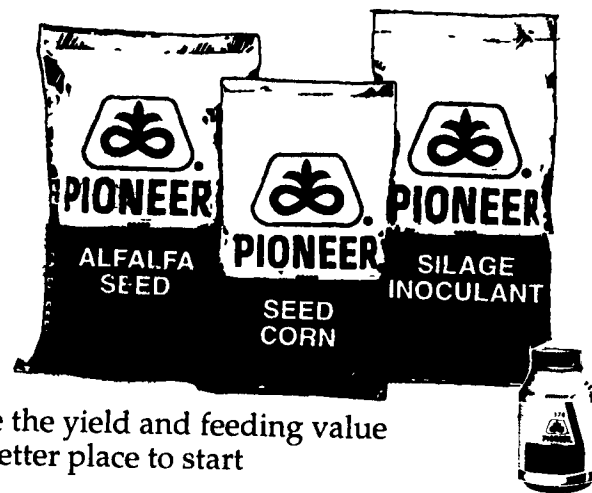

Several options exist for managing cover crops with herbicides. See the individual commodities sections within the Penn State Agronomy Guide or other related publications for more information about product selection.

Proper management of the cover crop will ensure its success. Plan the establishment and control strategies well ahead of time.

Be aware of potential limitations and problems that can arise with cover crop management systems. Keep expectations reasonable and adapt the management strategy when necessary to reduce potential problems and capitalize on the benefits.

Technology Proves Promising To Growers

Editor's note: The following is reprinted from the Conservation Impact, October 1994, published by the Conservation Technology Information Center (CTIC).

Dan Mcain
CTIC
Field Specialist

There's no doubt that this new wave of technology is exciting to those of us who want something better for the farmer, but it's also apparent there are details to be considered.

Variable Rate Technology

For instance, variable rate technology (VRT) involves matching the rate of a pesticide, nutrient, or seed delivery to the specific needs of a given site in the field. The basic idea is that, once the system is in place, the equipment will automatically deliver the precise or "more precise" amount of any input needed during a pass through the field.

The grower can choose from several systems to make this possible: both satellite-related (global positioning systems) and non-satellite systems. Most seem to involve grid-based soil sampling and/or monitors attached to equipment. Only the grower can decide if the expense is a worthy investment.

That could be a tough call at a time when much of the technology is still evolving and standards are still to be determined.

CORN TALK NEWS

Yield Monitors

Yield monitors seem to be the rage for those interested in gathering some information fast. The monitors, mounted on combines, can be set to gather data second-by-second during harvest. The yield data is collected on a high-volume computer disc and entered into computer programs that put it in map form.

One producer recently showed me his three-dimensional yield map and explained how the variation helped him determine problems with his tile drainage system that were hurting yields in part of a field. He noted that, just to look at the field, he would have never known there was a problem.

I hope the increases he expects in yield are great enough that the lateral lines he ran to remedy the problem will pay off.

Items To Ponder

Researchers at Purdue have been doing some limited on-farm research into variable rate technology. Here's some bits and piece of their findings:

- Not all the variability found in soil tests and important for crop management.

- Mapping techniques used to guide inputs can vary substantially.

- Yield data monitors can do a good job measuring average yield but performance at a specific point seems more variable.

- Don't expect yield increases on fields already well managed on a whole-field basis. The benefit comes in reduced input use. A key question is if savings cover the costs of VRT applications.

- Most equipment and software purchased now will be obsolete in two years, but those who use the current technology will be best poised to profit from the next wave.

- Enrolling one or two fields with an input supplier who offers variable rate technologies may be worthwhile as a learning experience, even if it is not currently profitable.

The 1995 Corn Club results reflect the variable and often stressful weather conditions encountered by the corn crop last year. Top yields above 200 bushels per acre were registered this year, but numbers of the high yielding fields above 150 bushels per acre were down from last year. Plant populations were almost exactly the same as last year, but the number of barren and down plants were slightly increased from last year.

This year we made a few changes in the report and in the club. We replaced our budget program with a machinery cost analysis worksheet. The objective of the worksheet was to describe how to calculate the ownership and operating costs for a piece of equipment. This year we focused on the corn planter. We have summarized our results from that exercise near the end of this report. We also have expanded our survey of the products used by the participants in the club. We hope to do more of this type of survey in the future. We appreciate the help of all of you who make this report possible: members, extension agents, crop consultants and seed dealers.

Accurate, Precise Single Seed Placement

Accurate seed spacing and precise depth increase yield potential.

- Time-proven positive air metering system and edge drop seed discs gently singulate seeds to eliminate wasteful doubles.
- The short 18" seed drop makes seed spacing accurate.
- Consistent seed depth is assured through our independently operating walking beam gauge wheels...adjust in 1/8" increments.
- Low air pressure gently handles fragile seed coat.
- Fewer moving parts reduce maintenance and downtime.
- No-till attachments give you flexibility to plant in all residual levels.
- Interchangeable seed discs available for soybeans, corn, sweet corn, popcorn, sorghum, milo, acid delinted cotton, sugar beets and others.

multi-year federal farm legislation. The Senate bill continued that tradition with a substantial number of Democrats and Republicans favoring final passage.

"This bipartisan support provides new legislation that will aid farmers, the general public, and the environment," Northey said.

The Iowa farmer noted the Senate version embraces additional programs the organization favored, including a new water quality program for crop farmers. The bill provides almost $1.5 billion for an Environmental Quality Incentive Program (EQUIP) to assist crop farmers and livestock producers implement new technology to protect natural resources.

The focus now returns to the House of Representatives, where farm bill supporters plan to push for floor action on a new farm bill soon after the Presidents' Day recess.

"We hope the House can move quickly to complete their bill and that President Clinton will embrace this bipartisan reform of federal farm policy," the farm leader said.

Northey leads the NCGA, which is made up of 25 state affiliates and more than 29,000 members who farm in 47 states.

When You Plant CFS Waxy Hybrids, You're Planting More Than Just Corn.

Facts prove that starch content is what makes corn the ideal animal feed. And that's what makes CFS Waxy Corn different from dent. CFS Waxy is 100% amylopectin starch...zero percent amylose. (Dent is 25% amylose).

Amylopectin starch is more digestible. That means CFS Waxy maintains no less than a 25% advantage over dent...in the feedlot or milking parlor.

On-farm tests show the average weight gain/feed efficiency in beef, sheep, swine and other animals fed waxy corn increased up to 10% over dent fed animals.

In dairy herds CFS Waxy increased butterfat, protein and milk production.

Faster weight gain, more milk and flexibility...that's why CFS Waxy hybrids are more than just corn.

NEW

The New Brillion Soil Commanders take Residue Management to the next generation of soil conservation efficiency.

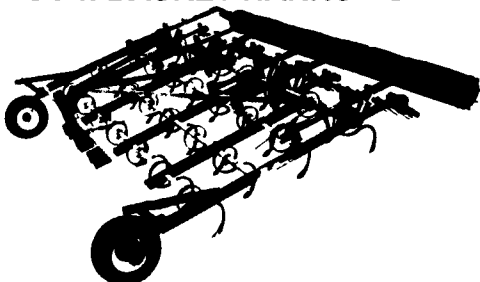

The Soil Commanders are versatile tillage tools designed to meet the needs of the mid-size farmer who uses a 150-200 H.P. tractor. One of the keys to the machine's versatility is that it uses interchangeable shank legs and individually mounted disk assemblies instead of a disk gang. This makes possible a machine with disk assemblies on the front and rear of the frame with chisel plow or deep-ripper shanks on 15", 24", 27" or 30" spacings.

NEW

3 PT. BASKET HARROWS

Brillion has designed a 3 pt. S-Tine field cultivator with a larger, aggressively angled 12" diameter rolling basket, a 4-bar frame that allows for either 4" or 6" tooth spacing and an adjustable leveler bar in 12', 15' and 18' sizes. Gauge wheels are optional.

AG SURE STAND SEEDERS

SS8, SS10 & SS12 SEEDERS

For years Brillion Grass Seeders have proven to be the best machine for planting grasses and legumes... and now they're even better! Larger, heavier boxes, high seeding rates, nylon lined seed meter, heavier frame, new drive system 8 ft., 10 ft., 12 ft. Available in 3-point or pull type. Also: 5 Ft., 3 Pt. Available

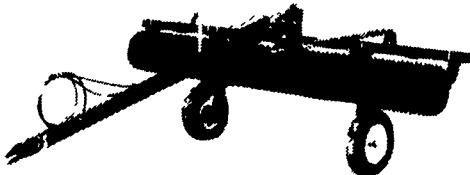

SERIES 03 PULVI-MULCHERS ML & WL

PULVI-MULCHERS Build a firm, clod-free seedbed - one that lets all the seeds germinate at one time. 12'6", 13'10", 15'2" & 18'9" rigid; 21'8" 25' and 30' flat fold.

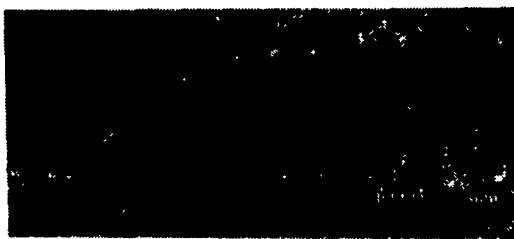

There's lots more reasons to buy Brillion... stop in and we'll talk.

P-SERIES TRANSPORT PULVERIZERS 10 Ft. to 18 Ft.

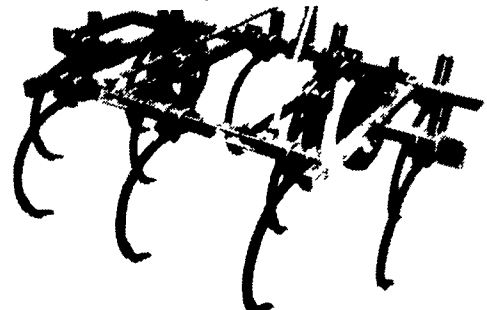

Rotary Frame Pulverizers; New PT10 Series Transport Concept. Machine weight is hydraulically rotated over the wheels for transport. This reduces draw bar hitch weight considerably and provides ample clearance for transport. Also Available As Pull Type.

X-FOLD PULVERIZERS

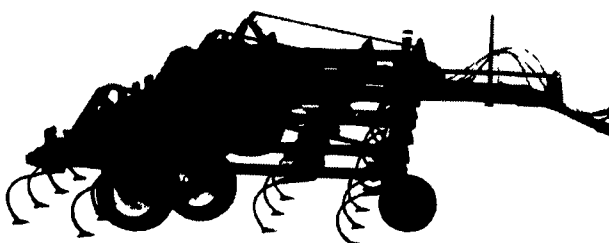

The X-Fold pulverizers are designed to meet the needs of today's larger acreage farmers...and Brillion offers them in two models and 11 sizes from 19' through 46'. Now available with 20" Ductile Wheels.

3 BAR CHISEL PLOWS

The CPP series mounted models enables you to turn short and fast... to transport easily, utilizing your tractor's hydraulic system, 7, 9, 11, 13 or 10,12,14,16 shank.

HFC FIELD CULTIVATORS 16½' to 31½'

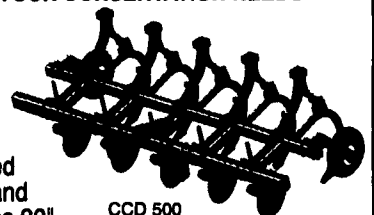

'C' Tooth - 4 Year Warranty

S-Tine - 3 Yr. Warranty

The "heart" of any field cultivator is the shank pivot point. A "bulked up" shank bracket made of cast ductile iron instead of the usual formed steel bracket, incorporated a hardened steel bushing AND a zerk grease fitting to lubricate the pivot point to reduce wear. The result is thousands of acres of extended life of the shanks.

COMPACTION COMMANDERS NO-TILL RIPPER/DEEP RIPPER DESIGNED FOR YOUR CONSERVATION NEEDS 3-5-7 Shank

Brillion introduces their new Compaction Commander...designed to break up hardpan and compaction as deep as 20". The standard V-shaped alloy point and wear strip leaves residue on the surface with minimal soil disturbance. Auto-rest shanks with 20" of trip height allows for non-stop tillage. Parabolic shanks lift and fracture the soil. 39" of underframe clearance assures trouble free operation even in heavy residue.

Fifty-one of the fields in the club received a post-emerge herbicide application. Of these, 18 did not receive a pre-emerge herbicide. The remaining 33 (28%) received at least two herbicide applications. Of the 18 that received a total post herbicide program, 15 of those had atrazine applied. As a result, 82% of corn club fields received atrazine either pre or post emerge.

Post emergent herbicide use

The number of trips (including custom applications) that were made across each field averaged 5.9, but there was a wide variation among Corn Club fields as shown below.

PHOENIX, Ariz. — The nation's corn growers overwhelmingly reaffirm federal farm policy position: flexibility, simplicity, and, certainty.

At their annual meeting, the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) delegate body ratified its policy that calls for less government on the farm.

"Delegates stressed the need for greater producer flexibility and responsibility," said NCGA Vice President Wallie Hardie. "We are extremely proud that the NCGA was at the forefront of calling for flexibility. The voting delegates solidified the innovative position our organization developed one year ago. Our position is built on the key principles of flexibility, simplicity, and certainty which will lead to greater opportunity for profitability," said Hardie, a North Dakota farmer.

Legislation moving through Congress will afford farmers the flexibility they need, but farmers at the Phoenix meeting expressed their concern about loan rate caps in both the House and Senate bills.

"We would like to see lawmakers remove proposed caps on loan rates in order to provide adequate income protection for farmers during times of low prices," said NCGA President Bill Northey.

Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman told farmers the Clinton Administration supported a similar policy. Glickman addressed the Commodity Classic, the joint convention held by the NCGA and the American Soybean Association (ASA), via satellite, from Washington.

AS part of the NCGA conservation policy, farmers addressed the early-out issue of the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP). "It's best that a lot of this land remain in the CRP," said Hardie. "We don't want to see environmentally-sensitive land brought into production as a result of higher corn prices. It would not be in the best interest of growers or the environment to sacrifice long-term soil conservation measures."

Corn supplies are projected to reach record lows as a result of a mediocre harvest last fall and soaring demand for corn in the U.S. and overseas. But this situation does not justify opening the CRP. Flexibility on non-CRP land will give farmers ample opportunity to respond to the market.

The NCGA delegates also voiced concern that foreign countries may restrict imports of crops grown in the U.S. from genetically modified seed. Delegates adopted a resolution to oppose policies of other nations that would impose artificial trade barriers against agricultural products that are proven safe by scientific studies.

"Our position has been and will continue to be that such actions are simply artificial trade barriers," said Northey, an Iowa farmer.

In other action, the more than 250 NCGA delegates:

- Decided to support congressional action that would allow all farm lenders to participate in the fledgling Farmer Mac program.

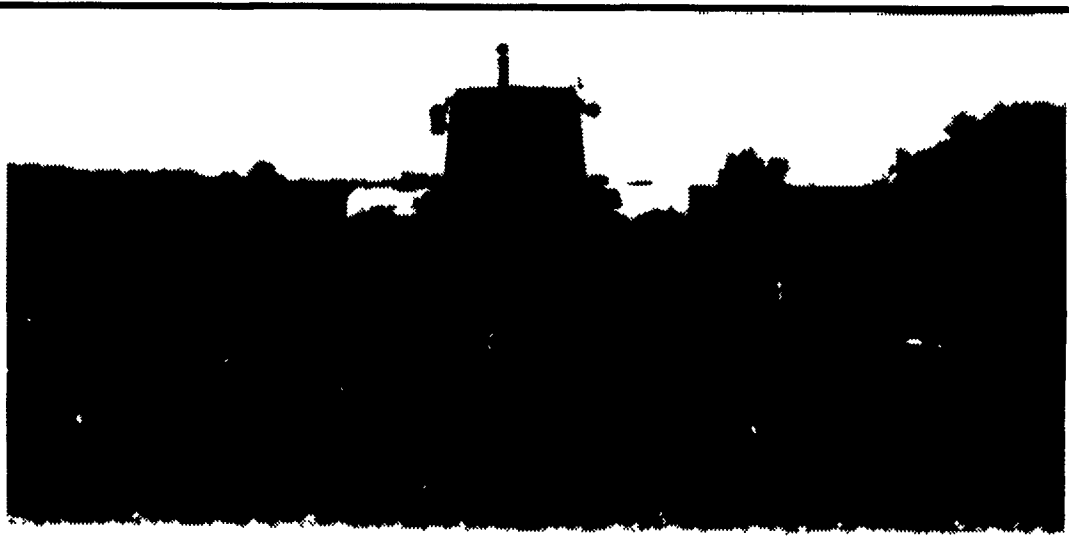

- Urged the federal Department of Transportation to monitor interstate rail and river providers to ensure equitable shipping rates and service for the movement of farm commodities.

Hardie said the transportation problem is especially acute in the western Corn Belt.

"We haven't been able to move corn out of our country elevators," he said. "It's ironic that we have a significant shortage of corn in many areas and we've got corn lying on the ground, going out of condition in other areas."

The first-ever joint convention held by two of the nation's top commodity organizations drew a crowd of over 3,700 farmers and industry leaders from all over the country. The NCGA represents growers in 47 states and has approximately 28,500 members and 25 state-affiliated organizations.

The farm management exercise on planter cost analysis was completed by 41 participants. The objective of the exercise was to introduce a simple method for estimating machinery costs and determine the breakeven acreage required to cover fixed costs given the custom rate. The participants completed a worksheet consisting of 12 questions to estimate ownership and operating costs and calculate the either the penalty for ownership or for custom hire.

Analysis of Planter Costs

The first step in the analysis of planter costs required the estimation of ownership costs (depreciation, interest, insurance, and housing) and operating costs (repairs, fuel and oil, tractor usage, and labor). Average planter ownership and operating costs are summarized in Table 1. Total planter costs averaged $10.43/A, with a range from $4.21/A to $20.65/A.

The second step in the analysis was to compare estimated ownership and operating costs with the custom rate to determine if ownership or custom hire was more economical. For ownership to be economical, the difference between the custom rate and operating costs must be less than ownership costs. For the 41 farmers this difference averaged $8.24/A and ownership costs averaged $5.63/A, so for most producers it was more economical to own a planter than custom hire. From this information, a breakeven acreage for covering ownership costs was also calculated. This averaged 130.3 acres, which is 48.2 acres less than the average number of acres planted. For those producers with costs above the custom rate, the penalty for ownership averaged $2.87/A. For those producers with costs below the custom rate, the penalty for custom hire averaged $4.14/A.

Planter Questionnaire Results

A questionnaire was also completed as part of the exercise. A total of 48 planter questionnaires were returned and analyzed. The objective of the questionnaire was to collect information on the age and type of planters and tractors used for corn planting, determine the extent to which field time and fuel consumption records are kept, and what custom hire services are currently being used. Questions were also asked about planter costs and possible changes in planting practices both before and after completion of the planter cost analysis worksheet.

The most common make of corn planter used was John Deere. Almost fifty percent of all planters reported were either JD 7000 (25%), JD 7200 (15%), or JD 1240 (6%). The second most common make of planters reported was International Harvester at 23%. These were divided fairly evenly among IH 56, IH 800, and IH 900 planters. White was Case (11%), and Massey-Ferguson (7%). The average age of the tractor was 12.2 years, with the year purchased ranging from 1963 to 1994. Overall, only 39% of the tractors were purchased new. Of the tractors purchased in the past five years, 37% have been new.

Detailed records on time and fuel spent on field operations were kept by only a few of the producers. Time records were kept for all field operations by only 6% of the farmers. Some time records were kept by 34% of the farmers, but most (60%) indicated they keep none. Fuel records were kept by more farmers. Almost 13% indicated keeping fuel records on all field operations and 43% indicated they keep fuel records for some field operations. A majority of the farmers (44%) indicated they keep no fuel consumption records on a per operation basis. These types of information are very valuable in calculating machinery costs and making decisions about machinery replacement and crop selection.

Use of certain custom hire services was common among the farmers surveyed. The most commonly used custom hire service was for liming. Over 80% of the farmers reported having this operation done for them. Other operations custom hired included spraying (23%), harvesting (21%), fertilizing (19%), grain and silage hauling (11%), and plowing (2%).

Prior to completing the planter cost analysis, the farmers were asked if they felt their planter costs were lower, about the same, or higher than the local custom rate. Over 42% thought their costs were lower, 51% thought they were about the same, and the remaining 7% thought they were higher. After analysis of their costs, 78% found that their costs were lower than the custom rate. Of the farmers who thought their cost were lower, 93% were right. Of those who thought their costs were about the same, 61% were lower and 39% were higher than the custom rate. All those who thought their costs were higher actually had estimated costs below the local custom rate. Of the 36% of the farmers who indicated that they do some custom planting for neighbors, only one had costs in excess of the custom rate.

Before completing the worksheet, the farmers were also asked if they were contemplating any changes to their planting practices. Only 17% indicated any changes. These included changing to ridge-till, doing less no-till, purchasing a new planter, going to narrow rows, adopting no-till, increasing the population rate, and changing planter box treatments. After the analysis, over 25% indicated that they were planning changes, including planting more acres (13%), replacing their planter (9%), planting less acres (2%), and doing custom planting for the first time (2%).

The planter cost analysis worksheet provides a rough estimate of costs associated with machinery ownership and operation. As such it is a helpful device for making machinery replacement and custom hire decisions. Other important considerations not covered by the worksheet include the quality, availability, and timeliness of custom hire services as well as the quality and timeliness of the planting done with your own planter. Late planting or poor stands resulting from either will impact the economics of machinery ownership.

Between The Rows

Another issue that came up often in discussion this winter is the need to continue to plant deep enough (one and a half inches) to get good seed coverage for uniform germination and to avoid herbicide injury. Too many times problem fields are cropping up where the problem can be traced back to shallow planting. Shallow (one inch deep) planting can help to get early planted corn out early, but it requires more careful planting, more uniform seedbeds, and attention to the herbicide program to avoid creating more problems that you are trying to avoid in the first place.

We also need to do more soil testing and use it as a basis for fertilizer recommendations. With the high cost of fertility programs and high soil nutrient levels these days, many growers are finding real cost savings by soil testing and accounting for N credits from previous crops and manures.

At a minimum, occasional soil testing every 4-5 years can give you a ballpark estimate of your fertility and the soil test trends on your fields. This would be helpful to see if you can expect a response to various nutrients and whether your current fertility program is working.

A big issue discussed this winter has been what to do about N rates. Our calculations, based on corn prices and current fertilizer prices, suggest cutting less than 5 percent. A better strategy would be to allocate N fertilizer more carefully based on N credits from manures or previous crops.

Spreading manure more uniformly and incorporating it soon after application could also help to reduce N losses and reduce N requirements. It would also be a good year to try out a soil N test, available from many crop scouts and consultants around the state.

Minimizing the effects of drought stress has been another issue that came up in discussions this winter. Several articles in the press have suggested the possibility of a national drought again in 1996. Whether we like it or not, drought is a big problem for us in Pennsylvania.

I recently calculated that the droughts of 1988, 1991, 1993, and 1995 cost us about 140 million bushels of corn in the last eight years or nearly $400 million in Pennsylvania alone. That's a lot of corn that had to be bought and shipped in from somewhere else.

What can we do about this? Install irrigation systems? Probably not.

There are, however, some management strategies that we can consider to minimize the effects of these droughts.

Paying close attention to drought tolerance in hybrids is one critical tactic that is often overlooked. Some of the hybrids with good drought tolerance will yield 10-15 bushels/acre better than their competitors in droughty environments, even though they may yield the same in high yielding situations.

Another tactic to avoid the effect of dry weather is growing corn in rotation with other crops. This helps to diversify our crop mix as well as improve yields on our corn acres.

This year, at Rockspring, for example, corn after soybeans yielded about 20 bushels better than continuous corn. This rotation effect is often enhanced in drought years such as last year.

Another tactic to reduce the effect of drought is relying more on reduced tillage to save soil moisture, especially on these rotated fields.

Other defensive strategies, such as having a mix of hybrid maturities, avoiding high plant populations on droughty soils, and avoiding soil compaction, also have a place where drought stress is a possibility.

Having a mix of hybrid maturities was especially important this year since full season hybrids were hit hard by the drought. Those who relied only on the long season corns this year may have been hurt by this strategy.

Another issue on the table this winter has been how to avoid mycotoxins in high-moisture corn and corn silage. We know that harvesting silage and grain too dry, not filling silos rapidly, and storing in silos that don't seal well all contribute to mold and mycotoxin problems.

What is not so well understood is how to avoid the infection of the crop in the field. Plant pathologists tell me that the fusarium fungi are always out there and if conditions are right, the fungi will be there. What we don't understand well is how practices such as no-tilling into corn stalks, spreading mycotoxin-contaminated corn silage, or manure from cattle fed mycotoxin containing feeds affects the potential for molds in the succeeding crop.

Theoretically, the inoculum from some of the sources should be small compared to what's out there anyway, but I suggest erring on the conservative side and including some tillage to bury this material if possible — especially mycotoxin-contaminated grains and silages.

These and other issues are ones we have to continue to look at carefully as the new season unfolds.

Remember, a key part of success is to follow up your planning this spring with some careful evaluation throughout the year to learn what was successful and what wasn't. The better job we do with that, the more prepared we'll be for 1997.

Finally there's a time-release no-till grass herbicide that works all season long. Even in heavy residue. TopNotch™ selective herbicide. This great new corn herbicide gives you better grass control with an early preplant application (up to six weeks before planting). But whether you apply TopNotch early preplant or at planting, its timed-release formulation keeps working right through the season. TopNotch works great on small-seeded broadleaf weeds such as pigweed, common ragweed and lambsquarters, too. It's easy to handle. And it's ideal for complex tankmix combinations. So if you're serious about no-till, ask your full-service crop protection dealer/applicator about the most exciting no-till grass herbicide around. There's just one word for it: TopNotch

CORN TALK NEWS

Despite Lack Of Farm Bill, Ag Thrives

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman stopped short of predicting when a new farm bill would be written, but he said the Senate bill is a step in the right direction in providing farmers the safety net they need to survive bad years.

This safety net, along with continued emphasis on the environment, expanded global trade research, and rural development efforts will be the key components the administration uses in evaluating the farm bill.

It will also be more flexible and move away from micro-management by the federal government, he told attendees of the Commodity Classic General Session.

A farm bill could be as close as two to three weeks away, according to Iowa Senator Charles Grassley, who addressed the NCGA delegate body. Although Glickman would not commit on a time frame for a new farm bill, he told producers to expect an extended sign-up period once the farm bill is

- Recorded exports of $60 billion are expected this year.

- Farm prices are the highest they have been in years. This is partially due to reduced crop size but also because of strong world demand.

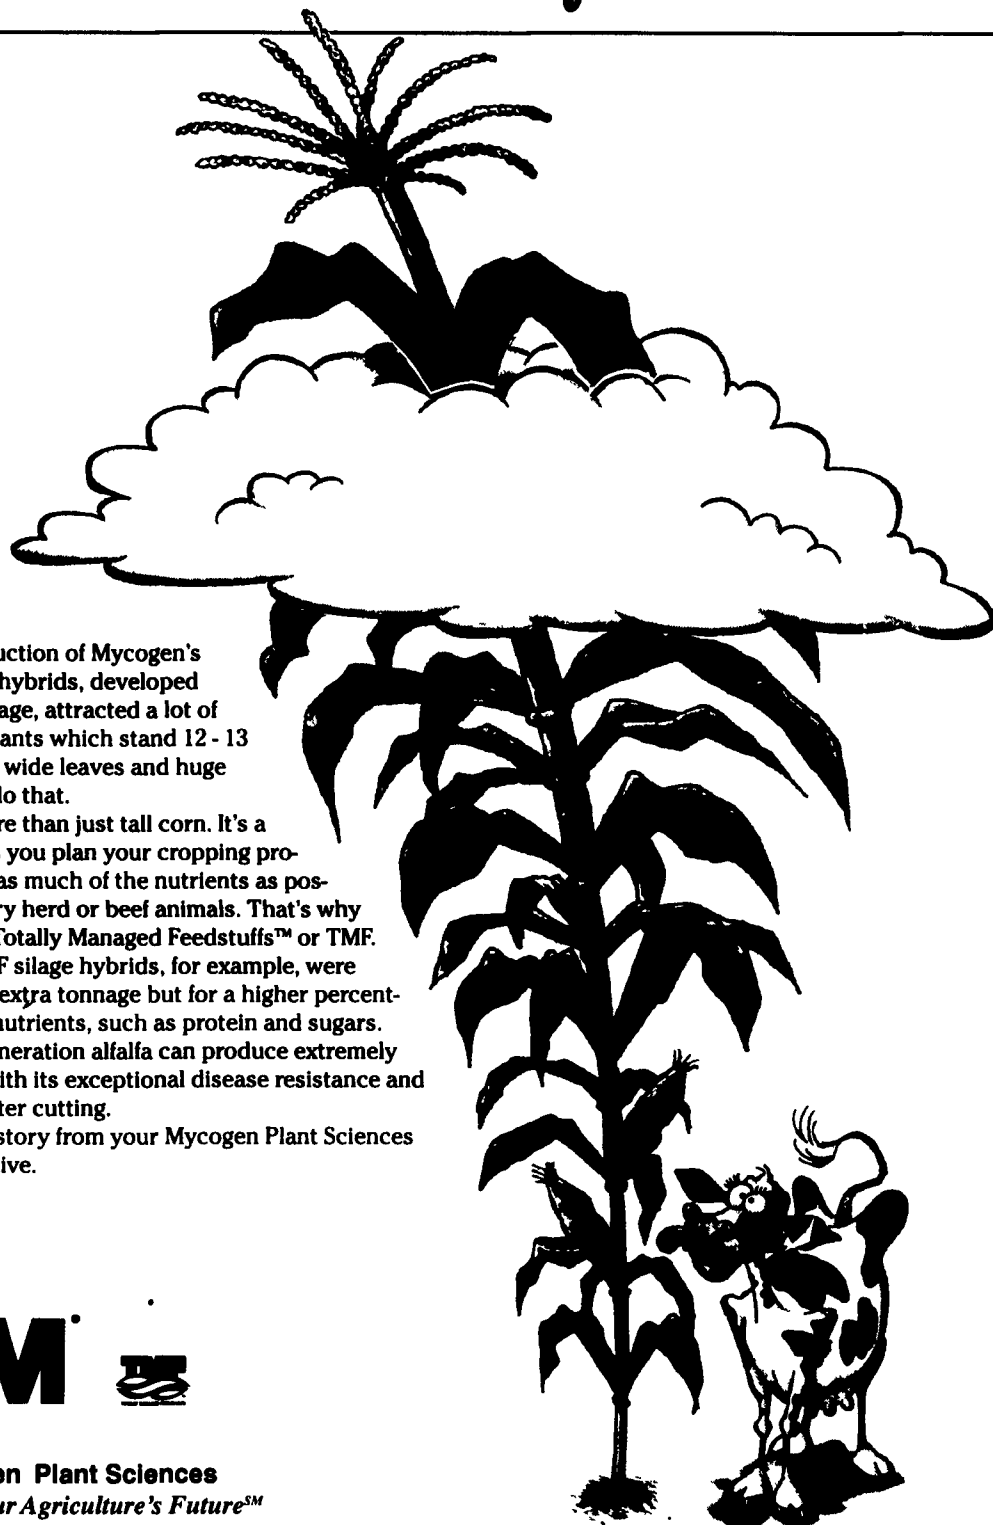

- Farm program costs are way down because of record exports and high prices.

"I don't know if we're going to see a golden age for agriculture, but prices will be higher for some time to come," Glickman said. However, he voiced concern over an emerging projectionist attitude.

"No embargoes," Glickman said in response to a farmer's question on the administration's trade policy. "Cutting off America's role in the world would be a dagger in the heart of American agriculture. Our goal is to open markets and break down trade barriers."

Two out of three bushels of US wheat are shipped overseas and the livestock industry has little growth potential without increased export emphasis. Corn and soybeans are moving in the same direction and will become increasingly dependent on exports for profitability, he said.

With TMF from Mycogen Plant Sciences, there's more to love than just tall corn.

The 1994 introduction of Mycogen's first TMF corn hybrids, developed exclusively for silage, attracted a lot of attention. Corn plants which stand 12 - 13 feet tall with very wide leaves and huge ears will tend to do that.

But TMF is more than just tall corn. It's a system that helps you plan your cropping program to produce as much of the nutrients as possible for your dairy herd or beef animals. That's why Mycogen calls it Totally Managed Feedstuffs™ or TMF.

Mycogen's TMF silage hybrids, for example, were bred not only for extra tonnage but for a higher percentage of digestible nutrients, such as protein and sugars. Likewise, TMF Generation alfalfa can produce extremely high RFVs even with its exceptional disease resistance and quick recovery after cutting.
